Better Times Are Stressed By Roosevelt At Charlotte

Denies Invading States' Rights in Achieving Prosperity Gains.

30,000 Sit in Rain To Hear Executive

Hail President's Defense of NRA, New Deal's Farm Program.

Text of the President's Address. Page 7.

By the Associated Press.

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 10.—A cheering, sopping-wet audience from the heart of the Southland heard President Roosevelt assert today the Nation has rounded the corner toward prosperity, but that individual liberties have not been removed and inherent rights of the sovereign States have not been invaded along the way.

The President, himself soaked by a heavy downpour, spoke to thousands of persons assembled from seven States at the "green pastures" rally in Charlotte's municipal stadium.

Leaves for Washington.

A cloudburst earlier in the afternoon had delayed the President nearly an hour en route from Asheville. Rain began pelting down again as the Roosevelt cavalcade of cars wound through packed Charlotte streets, but the sun came out and a rainbow appeared as he stepped on the speaker's platform.

Rally officials estimated 30,000 persons were jammed into the WPA-built bowl and clustered around its rim.

Following the address the President boarded his special train and started for Washington at 7:15 p. m.

In his speech he placed the depression period definitely in the past, referring to it as "that historic corner," and maintained his Administration had created a "definite upturn."

He asserted:

"I speak to you today as common sense American men and women. You will agree that from the material aspect, this Nation's consuming power has been rapidly restored.

"I trust that you will likewise agree that better conditions on the farms, in the factories and in the homes of America are leading us to the spiritual figure of the psalmist—green pastures and still waters."

The President did not mention the Supreme Court in his reference to States' rights. He did say, however, that "most thinking people" believed the NRA had accomplished as much in restoring "prosperity" as any Federal law in the past century, and that his farm program, by controlling and reducing the surplus, had brought the South 12-cent cotton.

Recalls Recent Conditions.

"Not only have we aroused a public understanding and approval of the need of ending soil erosion and water run-off, but we have enabled the public, through a practical prosperity, to begin to pay their debts, to paint their houses, to buy farm tools and automobiles, to send more boys and girls through school, to college, to put some money in the bank and, incidentally, to know for the first time that the money in the bank is safe.

Turning to general business conditions, the President said "only a few years ago" farmers, factory workers, small business men, corporations, local, State and national governments were "not making both ends meet" and were paying "unconscionable and ruinous interest charges."

"History will record," he added, "that by the year 1936 a very much larger number of individuals are back in the black, so are most of

Dog Vicious, Neighbors Claim; Not So, Say Owner, Policeman

D. C. Family Charges Pet Belonging to Daughter of Iglesias, Puerto Rican Commissioner, Frightened Boy in His Own Backyard.

Donna, a 2-year-old German shepherd dog, owned by Miss America Iglesias, daughter of the Puerto Rican commissioner, will face what amounts to a trial next Thursday in Police Court on charges of being "fierce, dangerous and noisy."

The charges were preferred yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. David Wienfeld, 3173 Porter street northwest, neighbors of Miss Iglesias, who lives next door with her father, Santiago Iglesias.

The Wienfelds complained to Assistant Corporation Counsel James W. Lauderdale, who several months ago had to sit in judgment on Mrs. Forbes Morgan's Great Dane, Hamlet.

Supporting the Wienfelds were two neighbors and six colored maids, all of whom agreed that Donna was vicious and should be banished from the neighborhood.

Fanny Boston, colored, a maid at 3177 Porter street, testified that Donna bit her on July 13.

Miss Iglesias insisted that Donna was "even-tempered" and "well-behaved." She admitted that the animal may have snapped at Fanny Boston, but pointed out last night that at the time Donna was in a "delicate" condition. Donna's new puppies arrived just 15 days later.

Mr. and Mrs. Wienfeld said Donna bit their 5-year-old child and also their maid, Virginia Harris. They complained that the animal's howling at night kept them

Sun Opposed To Roosevelt In Baltimore

Cannot Back Re-election of President, Says Democratic Paper.

Will Support Landon if He Declares for Economic Liberalism.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 10.—The Baltimore Sun, independently Democratic newspaper for 99 years, will announce tomorrow morning that "in this campaign it is unable to advocate the re-election of President Roosevelt."

The Sun, which has supported every Democratic candidate except Bryan in 1896 and 1908, will say:

"Within 60 days the people must make their choice in the Presidential election. It is, therefore, incumbent upon those who undertake to address themselves to public opinion to give expression to their views. The Sun now states that in this campaign it is unable to advocate the re-election of President Roosevelt."

Against "Old Guardism."

The newspaper explains "opposition to Mr. Roosevelt does not mean support of Hooverism or of Old Guardism," and adds that "if Gov. Landon speaks in clear and bold terms, facing specific problems and taking his stand unequivocally on the side of this true economic liberalism, the Sun will support him, no matter what his prospects may be."

But, it explains, "if he does not speak in clear terms, the Sun intends to continue to fight for ideas that it believes to be sound and in the interest of the people, and will make the best of a situation in which it cannot advocate the election of either candidate."

The announcement states the Sun is in favor of many of the so-called new programs: "Shall we have social responsibility? An emphatic yes. Shall we have old age pensions? Yes. Shall we have unemployment insurance? Yes. Shall we guard the helpless, the unfortunate, the handicapped? Yes. But as the sure foundation of it all, let us restore and preserve the system which produces in abundance the wealth with which we support the fortunate and the unfortunate alike."

Stand Taken "With Regret."

Continuing, the newspaper says: "This statement is made with regret. We remember Mr. Roosevelt's courage in the black days of March, 1933. We respect his devotion to the cause of the unfortunate. We believe he has created in many citizens a new sense of civic duty. We admire him for the enemies he has made among pirates of high finance."

The Sun explains its opposition to many of the economic measures employed by the Administration, saying there has been "little of an economic character in the Administration that the Sun has been able whole-heartedly to support save the work of the stepchild of the Administration, Cordell Hull." It says it stands for competitive capitalism, and believes this system is not inconsistent with social responsibility, and that "competition is, moreover, the protection of political liberty."

PWA Awards To Be Pushed By President

Writes Rep. Beiter That $300,000,000 Jobs 'Will Go Forward.'

Roosevelt to Announce Additional Group of Projects Shortly.

The last obstacle in the path of the new $300,000,000 public works program appeared to have been removed yesterday, when President Roosevelt declared unqualifiedly that the program "will go forward without interruption."

The pledge was contained in a letter to Representative Alfred F. Beiter, of New York, who led the last Congressional drive to provide for public works projects of long-time value in the $1,425,000,000 relief act.

For months the program has been at a standstill, due largely to White House requirements that 100 per cent of all labor on PWA projects must come from Federal relief rolls. Secretary of Interior Ickes had insisted that PWA allotments could not be made on that basis, due to shortage of skilled relief labor.

Made Slight Modification.

Recently the President announced a slight modification in the requirement, which would permit grants on the old basis to communities with which the Government had incurred a "moral obligation." Shortly afterward a small PWA allotment was made from old funds on a 70 per cent relief labor basis.

To date only $7,438,338 in 45 per cent grants and $317,000 in loans have been made from the new $300,000,000 appropriation. These allotments, on 127 comparatively small projects, were announced by Secretary Ickes on Wednesday.

The President's letter to Beiter, dated September 5, came in answer to a request from the New Yorker that the President clarify his position regarding the new $300,000,000 program.

Beiter forwarded to the President a letter from Edward J. Harding, managing director of the Associated General Contractors, making inquiries as to the status of the program.

Building Season Passing.

Earlier, Harding himself in a letter to the President had pointed out that the building season was rapidly slipping by without any allotments being made from the new fund.

Following is the text of the President's letter to Beiter:

"My dear Mr. Beiter:

"I have your letter of August 21, with which you inclosed a communication that Mr. Edward J. Harding, managing director of the Associated General Contractors of America, wrote you.

"The Associated General Contractors have shown a keen interest in the public works program and I am not unmindful of that interest. You may tell Mr. Harding that from time to time I shall continue to approve additional projects for inclusion in the Public Works Administration program, which will go forward without interruption.

"Recently I approved PWA projects amounting to approximately $22,000,000, on which construction will start within the next few weeks. I expect to announce an additional group shortly.

"As all these projects will be constructed through the agency of general contractors, I am sure that they will have a beneficial effect upon the construction industry.

"Very sincerely,

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

San Sebastian Shelling Is Resumed by Rebels As Terms Are Refused

Pall Covers Spanish Embassy, Once Glittering Society Stage

Only Two of Staff of 30 Remain as Revolt Splits Homeland; Senora Calderon Removes Belongings; Envoy's Family Cheerful Despite Plight.

The gloom and desolation of Spain's smoke-filled air has swept into that nation's little half-acre in Washington, and the majestic white embassy at 2801 Sixteenth street is a lonely place these days, haunted by fear and uncertainty. Wholesale resignations have left only former Ambassador Don Louis Calderon, his wife, two children, and a handful of servants out of the once large and gay staff of 30. All but two have gone.

Don Luis, who has resigned, remains secluded all day in an upstairs room smoking his pipe, tapping his slender white fingers on the arm of an ancient carven chair, waiting for his successor, whoever he may be, to arrive and accept the keys. His presence here is supposedly a guarded secret. He sees no one, not even receiving his very dear friends, the Peruvian Ambassador and the Netherlands Minister.

Custom requires that the departing ambassador present his successor with the house, an inventory of the goods, and the keys. Don Luis cannot go, therefore, although all his personal effects have long since been packed in trunks and shipped away.

Vivacious Senora de Calderon, a Frenchwoman by birth, her black eyes sparkling with excitement, yesterday removed a few last things in the embassy's big glistening Lincoln limousine, DPL-105, which she and her two children, Elena, 10, and Pauline, 18, do not expect to enjoy much longer.

She directed her chauffeur to handle gently an ancient Singer sewing machine, which he was stowing in the front seat of the car. Beside it were some cardboard boxes of Christmas tinsel, which she apparently saves year after year, like most other women, while on the gray embassy floor reposed the remainder of a case of vodka, which she was about to give to some friend.

There was something heartening about her quick smile, her good humor, in the face of an unknown future which may include exile from Spain. Elena, her chestnut hair in pigtails, was much more dolorous than the elder feminine members of the family. Blonde Pauline smiled readily.

Rebels renewed their attack on San Sebastian after loyalist defenders were said to have rejected the rebels' demand for unconditional surrender.

San Sebastian Attacked.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

San Sebastian, Spain (by warship to Saint Jean de Luz, France), Sept. 10.—A heavy artillery bombardment tonight shattered the 48-hour unofficial truce on the San Sebastian frontier.

Rebel war lords, it was understood, insisted on unconditional surrender of the city, and when this was refused, they renewed their bombardment.

Previous truce negotiations had failed on the same point—the demands of the government defenders that they be granted amnesty if they surrendered.

Within the city the defenders fought among themselves and an open clash was feared if Anarchists attempted to fire the city as they said they would do rather than surrender the city.

Cash Sent to Bilbao.

San Sebastian banks sent all cash and securities—including foreigners' holdings—to Bilbao. Consular officers protested this action to municipal Governor Antonio Ortego, declaring the act was illegal and discriminatory.

Government tankers began transferring gas and oil supplies to Bilbao. Anarchists attempted to fire the tanks but they were prevented by the less militant Basque nationalists.

Government defenders fled from Hernani, 2 miles and a half from San Sebastian, after rebel shells killed four persons and wounded eight.

Mass evacuation of San Sebastian increased, with thousands of refugees jamming docks and scrambling for places aboard foreign warships and Spanish freighters in the Bay of Biscay.

The French Ambassador, M. Herbette, nearly got into a fist fight with a Communist guard who sought to prevent him from embarking on the French torpedo boat Alcyon.

The arm of Mme. Herbette was bruised when she was jostled by the excited crowd.

Nazis Warned Europe Must Wipe Out Reds

Jews Linked to Bolshevists; Continent's Survival Is Held in Jeopardy.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Nurnberg, Germany, Sept. 10.—Bolshevism must be annihilated if Europe is to survive, Propaganda Minister Paul Josef Goebbels told the Nazi "Congress of Honor" today in a bitter attack on communism and Jews throughout the world.

Compromise with the Reds is impossible, Adolf Hitler's chief spokesman added.

"The question of bolshevism is the question of Europe's survival," Goebbels said. "In this question one must take sides, for or against, with all the consequences embodied in such decisions.

"Warning Trumpet."

"Bolshevism in practice is the well-planned attempt of Jews to gain power over all nations. Hence the fight against this danger is a fight concerning the whole world. This fight was started in Germany and was waged on German soil. Adolf Hitler is its historical leader.

"We must not be silent in the face of dangers besetting Europe. To make political decisions is the concern of the respective nations and their governments. But to point out future catastrophies and voice apprehension is the right and duty of everyone whom fate has endowed with insight and the possibility of making his voice heard by the world.

"That is why we sound the warning trumpet against this world danger at this congress. That is why we show up the practice of bolshevism and why we unmask its theories.

"Bolshevism could only spring from Jewish brains. It has organized the lowest human instincts for the annihilation of all valuable racial elements. Bolshevism is the dictatorship of inferiors."

Bolshevists, Jews Grouped.

Goebbels intermittently referred to Jews and Bolshevists as one and the same. He branded Moscow's propaganda abroad as lies and declared the world must be convinced of its danger.

"We must yell: 'The Jews are responsible, the Jews are responsible,'" said Goebbels, yelling himself. "They are responsible for conditions in Russia, Spain and elsewhere. They foment unrest. They are responsible for executions and starvation in Russia."

Goebbels criticized the aggres-

Veterans Back Policy of Blum In Spanish War

4,000,000 Pledge Support on Neutrality Stand; Strikes Spreading.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Sept. 10.—France's biggest body of war veterans—numbering 4,000,000—tonight pledged itself to support the government's neutrality policy in Spain.

Throwing their weight against the general confederation of labor with 5,000,000 adherents demanding reconsideration of the government's stand, the National Confederation of War Veterans informed the foreign office of their full approval of nonintervention.

The government, seeking to reinforce its neutrality stand, published the text of its formula to isolate the Spanish civil war, and the texts of the replies of Great Britain, Germany, Italy, Portugal, Russia, Poland and 21 other countries generally adhering to the principle of arms embargoes.

Strikes, meanwhile, spread throughout the land.

Metal Strike May Widen.

At Douai, the strike of metal workers for higher wages threatened to widen to other centers in northern France.

A shipping strike tied up 40 vessels at Lorient.

Chain groceries in Clermont-Ferrand closed their doors.

Socialists and Communists, united in a joint committee for discussion of the neutrality question.

The committee was appointed to confer later with Premier Leon Blum.

In the Lille region, 30,000 slept in their factories. Other workers "folded their arms" and refused to work in factories at Marseille.

An agreement was reached between 20,000 striking dock workers at Le Havre and their employers.

Officials announced that the strike of the Michelin Tire factories at Clermont-Ferrand was ended and that the workers were preparing to evacuate the shops and resume work tomorrow. The terms were undisclosed.

A split developed within the Confederation of Labor over the neutrality issue. The Paris Railway Union telegraphed Blum its confidence in the government's neutrality policy and protested against the metal union's action in sending a delegation to the premier without the confederation's permission.

Drought Falls Shy of '34 Peak; Crops Off 2%

Relief Costs for 500,000 Families Estimated at $125,000,000.

By Robert C. Albright.

The drought's crop ravages have been halted just shy of the more serious proportions of the 1934 blight, and a change for the better is expected in the general crop situation, the Agriculture Department announced yesterday.

The department's crop reporting board disclosed it had overestimated the extent of corn damage a month ago. Based on September 1 condition, it said the corn crop should be about 1,458,295,000 bushels, 19,160,000 more than were estimated August 1. Even so, it promises to be the smallest corn crop in 55 years. Further damage of spring wheat was reported, but winter wheat prospects remained unchanged.

500,000 Families Need Aid.

An average 2 per cent decline was suffered in all crops during August, but the board said "recent rains appear to have been sufficiently widespread to prevent further deterioration of crops from drought this season."

Meanwhile, the Resettlement Administration, Works Progress Administration and other relief agencies went ahead with plans to take care of more than 500,000 drought-hit farm families over the winter, at a cost nearly twice as much as estimated originally.

Total cost of drought relief is expected to mount to $125,000,000 before spring eases the drain, probably necessitating additional appropriations to supplement the $1,425,000,000 provided in the 1936 relief

Taxpayers Urge Projects in City, Oppose Taxes

Unable to Tell District How to Meet Deficit of $18,000,000.

By James D. Secrest.

Washington taxpayers represented yesterday at a public hearing on the 1938 municipal budget made it clear to the District Commissioners that they are opposed to any additional taxes, but at the same time several of them advocated Capital improvements and innovations which would increase District operating costs.

With microphones picking up their words, most of the citizens appeared somewhat timid about suggesting to the District heads how they might meet a $58,000,000 budget with anticipated revenue of $40,000,000. Without explaining just how it might be done, they intimated that the Commissioners might allow some of the proposed projects without increasing or broadening the tax levy.

A typical example of the attitude of the witnesses was the remark of R. B. English, of the Southeast Business Men's Association, who, after asking for $650,000 appropriation to replace the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge and for other improvements in the Southeast section, said:

"But if you put any more taxes on me I'm going to turn over my business to you. I do a $1,500,000 business annually, but my taxes amount to as much as my rent now."

The warning of Auditor Daniel J. Donovan that anticipated municipal revenue for 1938 will fall $1,677,000 short of current operating expenses and $18,000,000 below departmental

Hazen Would Tax U.S. Property To Fix Lump Sum Due District

Melvin C. Hazen, president of the Board of District Commissioners, yesterday proposed that the Federal contribution to the operating costs of the District government be based squarely on a basis of assessments of United States property in the Capital.

His suggestion was made following a closed conference of the Commissioners, principal department heads and J. L. Jacobs, director of the President's fiscal relations study, and his aids in the District Building.

Neither Jacobs nor the Commissioners would disclose the nature of the parley, but the director announced the first meeting of his advisory committee would be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow. At that time, he said, the committee probably will decide upon its procedure in drafting recommendations, and may schedule a time for hearing spokesmen for civic and trade organizations.

Hazen predicted an assessment against the Federal Government on the same basis as the $1.50 tax rate

1,570 Power Delegates Attend Unique Union Station Banquet

Vast Concourse Echoes to Rattling of Dishes as Conferees, Made Mellow by California Wines, Strike an Informal Note.

There were sounds of revelry by night in Union Station.

Last night, where the snores of waiting travelers usually echo dully in the great vaulted concourse, where the thud of dropped Gladstone bags usually mars the vast stone floor, their sounded instead the crash of breaking chinaware and the clang of dropped trays.

Washington's oddest banquet was under way.

All of the hard benches had been cleared out. In their place were banquet tables, shining with linen, gleaming with silver, and groaning with food.

Fifteen hundred and seventy delegates to the third World Power Conference collectively enjoyed themselves on 22,800 pieces of china. They ate olives and celery, Philadelphia pepper pot, Kennebec salmon from Maine, Virginia roast lamb, celery with cheese ramequins, raspberry ice, demitasse and two kinds of California wine—sherry and burgundy—bottled in Brooklyn.

Lucius Boomer, head of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York and president of the Savarin Cafes, which provided the menu, had set 2,200 places at 220 tables. Only 1,570 people came, at $7.50 a head.

Boomer shrugged lightly.

"This life—it is one of disappointments," he said. "We did our best."

The 36 gray granite Valkyries that stand on the tops of the pillars about the vast waiting room looked on a scene unlike any in Washington's social annals. There sat the power experts of 50 countries and the chieftains of the American Government power agencies and public utilities.

At the 120-foot-long speakers' table were the heads of each national delegation, studded with such American authorities as Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes, Owen WD. Young, chairman of the board

Ancient Cemetery in Anacostia Yields Bones Held Prehistoric

Excavators working on the new Bolling Field along the lower flats of Anacostia have unearthed what is believed to be an ancient Indian burying ground, it was disclosed last night.

Human skulls—among them those of children apparently dead for hundreds of years—were dislodged by a steam shovel. Discovery of the bones led to speculation among experts of the Smithsonian Institution, who plan to inspect the remains today.

Unusual formation of the skulls and jaw bones led to the belief that an extinct race of Indians—or perhaps prehistoric man—used the area as a burying ground.

The excavation site is in virgin soil less than 200 yards from the Potomac River's bank. Until recently it had been cultivated by the Department of Agriculture.

Nearly a dozen skulls have been uncovered, with scattered pieces of crumpled bone formations. The finds were less than 18 inches below the surface.

The ancient people apparently

Landon Starts East for Score Of Train Talks

G.O.P. Nominee to Speak in Half Dozen States; Climax in Maine.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., Sept. 10.—Gov. Alf M. Landon drove his Presidential campaign Eastward toward Maine tonight on a political swing embracing more than a score of personal talks in half a dozen important States.

Through Indiana, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Maine, and back again through New Hampshire, Massachusetts, New York and Illinois, the Republican nominee planned 22 rear platform speeches. Some were fixed definitely to the minute; others still were tentative.

The Kansan boarded his special train with a speech prepared for the climax of his journey—an address at Portland, Me., Saturday night, just two days before the State election. Aids said it was complete except for final polishing and would deal with "Government and Business."

As a member of his official party throughout the trip—Landon's second into the East—the Governor chose Lacy Haynes, Kansas manager of the Kansas City Star and close political adviser. Other Republican chieftains were scheduled to get aboard for traveling conferences at various points in the trip.

Others in Party.

Also accompanying the Governor were Carl Rott, a secretary; J. M. Nye, personal aid; E. Ross Bartley, press representative, and other assistants.

The candidate's last day in Topeka until next Tuesday was crowded with business. There were talks with Gifford Pinchot, former Governor of Pennsylvania; J. Reuben Clark, former ambassador to Mexico, and William R. Castle, Undersecretary of State during the Hoover Administration.

Pinchot told newspaper men he came "to discuss campaign matters with Gov. Landon and we had a very satisfactory discussion."

"I saw a draft of his Portland speech and it sure has the punch," he added. "I have been doing everything that I could in the Governor's interest and I propose to keep on doing it. We're working hard in Pennsylvania and expect to carry the State."

Chicago, where Landon's train was due at 9:20 a. m. (Central standard time) was the first scheduled stop. He expected to be met on the outskirts of the city by George P. Harding, Illinois national committeeman, and drive to Harding's home for luncheon.

Calls for Brief Stops.

Leaving Chicago at 2 p. m., the itinerary called for three-minute stops at Gary, Valparaiso, Plymouth and Fort Wayne, Ind. Pulling out of Manhattan Transfer, N. J., early Saturday morning, the nominee was listed for rear-platform appearances at Stamford, Bridgeport, New Haven and New London, Conn.; Worcester, Sterling Junction, Lowell and Lawrence, Mass.; Dover, N. H., and Kennebunk, Me. His train was due at Portland at 5:23 p. m. (Eastern standard time), Saturday, and his speech scheduled for delivery at 8 p. m. (Eastern standard time).

On the return trip, leaving Portland at 8:35 a. m. (Eastern standard time), September 14, brief stops will be made at Rochester and Nassau, N. H.; Springfield and Pittsfield, Mass.; Albany, Schenectady, Utica and Syracuse, N. Y. The train will arrive in Chicago at 8:10 a. m., September 15.

Leaving Chicago Tuesday morning, more appearances were under consideration along the Santa Fe's line through Illinois.

Landon's confereaces today with Clark and Castle were reported to have dealt with foreign relations, a subject the candidate was expected to discuss later in the campaign. His next political tour was mapped for the Midwest farm belt into such States as Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

In addition to Haynes, Landon official party for the Maine trip included:

Fred E. Murphy, publisher of the Minneapolis Tribune;

Harry Darby, Edwardsville, Kans., State highway director;

Jacob A. Harzfeld, Kansas City, Mo., attorney;

Oscar S. Harper, stockman of Sitka, Kans., and former athletic director of Notre Dame University;

John T. Harris, newspaper publisher of Hutchinson, Kans.; Edward A. Hayes, Decatur, Ill., former national commander of the Ameircan Legion; and Raymond Benjamin, Washington, D. C., of the Republican National Committee.

Verne Marshall, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, publisher, also planned to make the trip on Landon's invitation.

Husband Forbade Talking at Meals, Wife's Suit Avers

Charging that her husband insisted upon "extreme silence of all present except himself" at meal times, Mrs. Grace Newbold Brandes, 3404 Fulton street northwest, yesterday asked the District Court to award her a limited divorce from Dr. Elmer W. Brandes, Department of Agriculture scientist. She also charged cruel treatment.

Through Attorney Raymond Neudecker, Mrs. Brandes asked for alimony and the custody of their three children, Elizabeth, 19; Ann, 15, and William, 9. In addition Mrs. Brandes asked the court to enjoin her husband from prosecuting a divorce action he has instituted in Montgomery County, Md. The couple was married 21 years ago in Flint, Mich.

In pressing her claim that her husband was cruel when he forbade anyone except himself from speaking at meal times, Mrs. Brandes said, in her suit, that she and the children suffered nervous indigestion as a result.

Government Shown Using Election Funds Inquiry to Annoy the Republican Party.

By Franklyn Waltman

THERE is nothing new about the party in power on Capitol Hill using committees selected for nonpartisan purposes to serve its objectives. It has been done frequently, especially during the many years of Republican domination of House and Senate. It has been done, too, since the advent of the New Deal, notably in the case of the Black lobbying committee.

WALTMAN.

But not in recent years has an essential governmental function been prostituted to partisan ends in so bold and brazen a fashion as has the investigation now being conducted into this year's campaign expenditures by a special committee of the Senate under the chairmanship of Senator Augustine Lonergan, of Connecticut.

Theoretically, the function of this committee is to place a check on the misuse by anyone of money in connection with this year's election of a President, a Vice President and 30-odd members of the Senate. Its duty is to ferret out the sources of campaign contributions and the use made of them, not only by Republicans, but also by Democrats and other organizations and persons.

Actually the committee has indicated by its handling of revelations of campaign contributions made to help the Republican cause in Maine that, for the time being at least, it has become an adjunct of the Democratic National Committee and proposes to lend itself to the harrying of the Republican Party wherever the fight seems to be close.

A recital of the facts regarding the committee's disclosure that certain persons had made unusually large contributions to the Republicans in Maine, makes the facts seem on their face to be evidence that this group—or certain members of it—have a greater interest in serving the Democratic cause than in performing the duty of nonpartisan, impartial investigators.

As was its duty and right, this committee some days ago commenced "a quiet inquiry in Maine, not previously announced," as its statement explained. Examination of the books of the representatives of the treasurer of the Republican National and State committees of Maine, showed that five members of the duPont family contributed $22,600; that three Rockefellers had contributed $13,000; that two Archbolds had contributed $5,000; that J. P. Morgan had contributed $5,000; that Alfred P. Sloan, jr., had contributed $5,000.

What other facts the committee's investigator found regarding contributions to Maine Republicans have not been revealed by the committee. Undoubtedly there were other contributions not covered by the committee's statement. Whether the committee's investigator examined the Democratic account books was not stated by the committee. Its statement did not reveal a penny on that side of the ledger. All the committee had to say regarding Democratic contributions was that the investigation in Maine and other States had not been concluded and that "they will include a full report on all Democratic contributions and expenditures."

Had the committee, after ascertaining the Republican contributions, withheld them from publication until it had obtained a list of Democratic contributions it would not be subject to criticism. But it did not do that. Not only did the committee make public the contributions of 13 wealthy persons to the Republican cause—without showing a cent of the Democratic contributions—but it made them public in such a way as to arouse the suspicion that it was done at the direction of Democratic Chairman Farley and in order to offset the announcement that Gov. Alf M. Landon would speak in Maine Saturday—a piece of political strategy with which the committee in its official capacity should have no concern.

Sentor Lewis B. Schwellenbach, of Washington, a Democratic member of the committee, according to the New York Herald Tribune, telephoned the Maine list of contributions to the Democratic National Committee in New York before they were made public here. Indeed, first announcement of the committee's findings came—not from its office here—but from the Democratic headquarters in New York, accompanied by a Farley statement calling on Gov. Landon to explain the duPont, Morgan, Rockefeller et al. contributions.

Could anything be more shamelessly and brazenly partisan?

Perhaps the indictment should not be laid against all the Democrats on the committee, who, in addition to Sentor Schwellenbach, are Senators Longergan and Sherman Minton, of Indiana. Incidentally, the only Republican member of the group, Warren R. Austin, of Vermont, is sojourning in Europe. But they cannot escape blame for letting Senator Schwellenbach pervert the committee's integrity by this type of poor sportsmenship and unfairness, previously demonstrated when he was a member of the Black "OGPU" committee.

Disclosure of the duPont-Rockefeller-Morgan contributions were proper. Such contributions are an issue in this campaign. The people of Maine have a right to know what unseen forces are at work in their State, seeking to channel their votes. Once such contributions are revealed in a proper manner the Democrats are entitled to make as much of them as they can; the Republicans can meet the issue the best they can.

But at the same time the people of Maine are entitled to know who has contributed to the Democratic cause; who, for instance, supplied the money for resumption of the defunct Portland Evening News and the conditions under which a member of the Democratic National Committee staff was assigned to guide its activities in this campaign. With the power of subpena at hand, the committee should have had no trouble developing these facts and making them public along with the Republican contributions.

When it shall make public the Democratic side of its findings, if it has made any, remains a mystery. Inquiries at the committee room bring the response that the report of Democratic contributions is not ready and that it cannot be said when it will be ready. Perhaps Mr. Farley will permit the committee to speak on that aspect of the matter sometime next week or next month—after the Maine State election is held.

From the viewpoint of clean elections, free from the use of large sums of money, it is unfortunate this incident has occurred, for it lessens public respect for the impartiality of the Lonergan committee. From now on that committee's activities will be suspect.

Chieftains Hail Party Triumph In Georgia Vote

Russell's Victory Is Called Evidence of Popularity of Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Sept. 10.—Party chieftains hailed as a national victory today the landslide ballot by which Georgia Democrats swept aside the anti-New Deal Senatorial bid of Gov. Eugene Talmadge.

While Talmadge congratulated stanch Administrationist Richard B. Russell, jr., his victorious opponent in yesterday's prmiary, Democratic Chairman James A. Farley declared the victory "further evidence of the popularity of President Roosevelt."

Similar expressions came from leaders high in the party councils, including Secretary of Commerce Roper, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Secretary of the Interior Ickes, whom Talmadge once called "just another boondoggler."

Russell, renominated for a six-year term, carried 134 of the State's 159 counties and polled 202,402 votes to Talmadge's 25 counties and 105,120 votes. It was the first political defeat of the veteran Talmadge. Russell received 360 of the State's 410 county unit votes when he needed only 206. Talmadge collected 50.

Under the unit system, the county is the unit and goes to the candidate receiving a plurality of its votes. Primary nomination is tantamount to election.

Representatives Renamed.

In addition to Russell's majority, the entire Talmadge-indorsed slate of candidates for Statehouse offices, including Governor, trailed far behind.

Speaker E. D. Rivers, of the State House of Representatives, active New Deal champion, won the gubernatorial nomination over State Senate President Charles D. Redwine, backed by Talmadge. Judge Blanton Fortson, of Athens, was a poor third.

Nine incumbent Representatives in Congress were renominated, five without opposition. A new Representative, Stephen Pace, Americus attorney, was nominated from the Third District to succeed B. T. Castellow, who did not seek another term.

Farley said in New York:

"In his particular State Talmadge had a State administration functioning wholeheartedly in his behalf and yet he received one of the worst defeats in a major primary fight in Georgia. Talmadge made the New Deal the issue and the voters of Georgia gave their answer."

Wallace, at Tuskegee, Ala., to address a meeting of colored farmers, spoke with a broad grin when he said:

"Ofttimes a State election has national significance. This is one of those occasions."

The Political Arena

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Sept. 10.—President Roosevelt's "fireside chats" cannot be handled by radio station KFI and KECA here unless the talks are paid for, said Harrison Holloway, general manager of the stations.

Holloway described the talks as "nothing more than campaign speeches, in our opinion, and can not be released unless paid for by the Democratic National Committee."

Pointing out that talks by Gov. Alf M. Landon, the Republican nominee, are paid for by his party, Holloway said:

"If the President speaks at dedications or public events of national intefest—or at any time when he is officiating as President rather than a candidate for office—we shall be happy to broadcast his remarks as a matter of civic interest."

A call for "all national and Congressional candidates" to state how they stand on the spoils issue was made yesterday at League of Women Voters headquarters.

"Platform declarations and interpretations of the platform are not enough," said Mrs. George Gellhorn, of St. Louis, chairman of the league's campaign for "trained personnel in public service."

In a statement she added it was "about time" candidates indicated their position so that voters might know "what support may be expected in the next four years for a campaign to rid this country of political appointments and thus elevate public service."

Eastern Point, Conn., Sept. 10 (AP).—For the fourth successive time a record unparalleled in the party's history in Connecticut, Gov. Wilbur L. Cross was renominated today by the Democratic State convention.

The only member of his party to ever occupy the Governor's chair for three consecutive terms, the 73-year-old chief executive was renominated by acclamation.

The Governor made his political debut in 1930 shortly after closing a long career as professor of English and dean of the Yale graduate school.

Juneau, Alaska, Sept. 10 (AP).—Democratis legislative, Congressional and Territorial candidates, who advocated abolition of fish traps and the retention by the Territorial liquor control board of full power to enact liquor legislation, defeated their Republican opponents in Tuesday's election, returns indicated today.

Delegate Anthony J. Dimond, maintaining a 3-to-1 lead over his Republican opponent, Lester O. Gore, of Ketchikan, was assured another term in Congress.

The Legislature, composed of a Senator and four Representatives from each of the four Territorial divisions, will be Democratic when it convenes in January. Only two Republicans were assured of election.

New York, Sept. 10 (AP).—Democratic Chairman James A. Farley tonight suggested that "it is time to change the ancient by-word of the past from 'as Maine goes, so goes the country' to 'as Alaska goes, so goes the Nation'."

For the last 30 years, he said, Alaska has gone Republican when the national election went Republican and has gone Democratic when the national election went Democratic except in 1912 when Wilson was elected President as the result of a Republican split.

"The Alaska verdict," Farley said, "because of the similarity of economic interests, can be taken as an indication of what is going to happen in the Western States on November 3."

New York, Sept. 10 (AP).—Thomas J. Pendergast, Missouri Democratic leader recovering from an operation in Roosevelt Hospital, has improved to such an extent that he will be taken to his home in Kansas City within 24 hours, his physicians announced today.

Physicians, including Dr. A. Sophian, the Pendergast family physician, after a consultation today, said a second operation had been "postponed indefinitely," and Pendergast would return to Kansas City for further observation.

Petersburg, Va., Sept. 10 (AP).—Benjamin Muse is expected to be asked by the Petersburg City Central Democratic Committee to resign his post as State Senator, following his statement that he will not support President Roosevelt for re-election.

Resolutions asking his resignation will be acted on by the committee at a called meeting tomorrow night, S. D. DeShazor, chairman, said this afternoon.

Senator Black Maps Course With Liberals

New Dealer Speaks Up for President at Chicago Progressive Rally.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 10.—A New Deal Democrat, Senator Hugo L. Black, of Alabama, joined today with the Progressives of Wisconsin, the Farmer-Laborites and self-styled liberals of other States to chart a joint political course for the fall campaign.

Asserting he did not know what would be the outcome of a Progressive conference called for tomorrow by Senator Robert M. La Follette, of Wisconsin, and seven others, Black said he couldn't see "how the conference could do anything else" but support President Roosevelt.

Black was among the first to arrive of some 75 nationally known liberals expected. He said he had told Senator La Follette he would come, but did not know what the procedure would be.

"I assume the conference was called to discuss economic problems with a view to aiding those in distress," he said.

La Follette was expected late today, along with his brother, Philip, Governor of Wisconsin, Mayor LaGuardia, of New York, one of the signers of the invitation, was to arrive tomorrow morning.

Black, who served as chairman of Senate committees investigating air-mail contracts and lobbying activities, came here from a three-day speaking trip in Pennsylvania. He spoke in behalf of Congressional candidates and championed the candidacy of President Roosevelt.

He said he was convinced President Roosevelt would carry Pennsylvania.

4 U.S. Warships Are Withdrawn From War Zone

Action Is Taken to Avert Possible Danger in Civil Strife.

By the Associated Press.

In an attempt to avoid trouble, the United States yesterday withdrew its four warships from the turbulent Spanish coast.

But the vessels were left in nearby waters in readiness to steam again, if necessary, to the rescue of Americans still in Spain's revolutionary danger zones.

Secretary Hull announced the action at his press conference, less than two weeks after an unidentified airplane had attempted to bomb one of the vessels—the destroyer Kane—while it was proceeding to the aid of American refugees.

At the same time, he disclosed that American diplomatic and consular agents in Spain had been instructed to remain at their posts, but to flee the country should continued stay be unsafe.

Seeks to Avoid Danger.

A determination not to expose American naval craft to further danger—and the possibility of grave international consequences—generally was conceded to have prompted the Government's decision to withdraw the vessels.

The Secretary of State's formal announcement, however, did not mention the Kane incident.

The ships will not return to Spanish waters, he added, unless summoned by diplomatic or consular officers to evacuate the American Government representatives themselves or groups of American nationals that are destitute or marooned in the interior of Spain.

Estimating that more than 1,000 nationals thus far have been evacuated since the outbreak of the Spanish revolt, many of them by American naval vessels, Secretary Hull said a final appeal to the approximately 500 who have elected to remain there for business or family reasons was broadcast September 1, urging them to take advantage of existing facilities for evacuation.

Several Small Groups.

"There is no information," he added, "to the effect that any of the Americans remaining in Spain either seek or desire to come out of Spain, except a group of 100, more or less, of destitute Americans, and one or more small groups in the interior who are reported thus far to have been cut off from access to the seaports."

The Secretary did not reveal the identity or the whereabouts of these groups.

The heavy cruiser Quincy and the Coast Guard Cutter Cayuga, which is temporarily attached to the Navy, were proceeding last night to their new stations at Gibraltar, while the Kane and the destroyer Hatfield were en route to the south and west coasts of France.

Their withdrawal from Spanish waters drew a statement last night from Frederick J. Libby, executive secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War, that it would "merit the strong approval of every American."

"This move is another indication," he added, "that as a Nation we are through sticking our noses into the wars of Europe and the sooner Europe knows this, the better for the peace of the world. I heartily commend Secretary Hull for his wisdom in this situation."

6 Hunted in Theft Of $50,000 Gems

Minneapolis, Sept. 10 (AP).—The police and Federal agents pressed a hunt today for "between six and eight others" after an early morning raid netted a suspect and a horde of jewels, believed part of the loot in a spectacular daylight robbery in Chicago June 26.

The suspect—Russell (The Flea) Houston, 28—was seized in his Loop hotel room. Clinton W. Stein, Federal Bureau of Investigation chief in St. Paul, said Houston tossed three small packages, later found to contain 483 diamond rings, into the alley as officers entered the room.

The rings and other gems found in the room represented a total value of between $50,000 and $75,000.

Former Spanish Queen Speeds to Ill Son in N.Y.

Nice, France, Sept. 10 (AP).—The former Queen Victoria of Spain sped toward New York tonight and the bedside of her son, the Count of Covadonga, who is ill in a hospital.

A last-minute dash by speedboat enabled her to reach the liner Conte di Savoia. As the ship slipped out of the harbor, the Prince and Princess of the Asturias circled in their speedboat and waved farewell.

With Victoria were her daughter, the Princess Torlonia, a granddaughter and son-in-law.

Embassy Lonely as Spanish Ambassador Awaits Successor

Yesterday, Senora de Calderon and her two daughters supervised removal of some of their personal property from the embassy. destination of the family. They have relatives in both countries, and are known to be planning to return to the continent, but have not revealed where.

Latest to resign from the embassy staff was Maj. Ramon Franco, brother to Francisco Franco, leader of the Fascist rebels in Spain. His resignation had been expected for months, and was anticipated in Madrid by newsmen a week ago.

Two commercial attaches remain behind, Don Jan Terrasa and a clerk. The counsellor, first secretary, second secretary, military attache, air attache, chancellor, social secretary, and agricultural attache, have all said adios to Washington.

Most of them were in active sympathy with the rebels, which is quite easy to understand, since most European diplomatic corps are recruited from the aristocracy.

Six stenographers send lonely clacks from their machines echoing through the beautiful tiled patio with its lemon, rubber, and orange trees. A pet turtle is in practically an isolated hot, house wilderness there, for seldom does anyone pass through.

Two butlers out of ten domestics have stood by their master, Rafael Cortez and Leonardo Sanchez, both from Madrid. The cook is still concocting Spanish delicacies. There was no reason for him to resign—he's a Pole.

The remaining servants and clerical help spend their time whispering the latest rumors. Complete secrecy envelops the doings of the "front of the house." Everywhere Spanish intrigue encounters American forthrightness, hope mingles with despair.

The evil days which shadow Spain reach out to disturb the life of what was one of the gayest posts in town, famed for its lavish dinners, and its smartly dressed women—for the Spanish were recognized as the best-dressed in the feminine diplomatic set.

Observers are wondering if the same fate which shut the Russian Embassy during and after that country's revolution will close the heavy iron grilled doors of the Spanish Embassy. The Russian Embassy was closed for years until the Soviet sent Ambassador Troyanovsky here. Like the Russian Embassy, the Spanish is on Sixteenth street, part of the "Embassy Row" which Mrs. John B. Henderson attempted to establish on that thoroughfare. It seems to be an unlucky address.

Rebels Attack San Sebastian As Truce Ends

being a rebel spy, was released after Ambassador Herbette intervened.

Despite the apparent breakdown of truce negotiations, foreign consulate officers declared they were confident San Sebastian would surrender before rebel troops entered its streets.

Basque Nationalists determined to save the city from destruction.

There were "strong indications" that the rebels also would agree to terms rather than wreck the famous summer resort.

The Basque Nationalists, who wrested control of the city from the more militant anarchists, apparently were speeding evacuation in preparation for an early surrender.

Refugees fleeing to France throughout the day brought the total evacuation to about 40,000 of the city's residents.

Merchants frantically tried to unload their remaining stocks, expecting that rebel forces soon would be patrolling the streets.

As soon as the rebels should march into the city, it was expected that their war lords immediately would consolidate forces for a concerted march on Madrid to the south.

The actual instigators of the unofficial armistice tonight remained undisclosed, with neither belligerent accepting the initiative.

Much weight had been brought to bear, it was believed, by the civil governor, Antonio Ortega, who declared:

"There will be no burning of San Sebastian while I am alive."

Previously, through intermediaries, he had unsuccessfully sought to surrender the city after anarchists had sworn to burn it to the ground rather than capitulate to the rebels.

Desperate Struggle.

Gibraltar, Sept. 10.—Near exhaustion after two months of the bloodiest fighting the world has known since 1918, Spanish rebel and loyalist armies today threw all available resources—men, arms and munitions—into the desperate struggle on the Estremadura front.

West of Toledo and on a front centering about the city of Talavera de la Reina, three rebel columns joined forces and prepared for a battle against loyalist militiamen in a struggle which both sides believed would determine the fate of Madrid.

Drastic censorship concealed the outcome of the Estremadura fighting. In other sectors, meanwhile, engagements were limited to artillery and aerial bombing. Loyalists continued to harass rebels besieged in Oviedo, Huesca, Granada and Toledo.

Rebels in Spain Charting Rule Of Dictatorship

Monarchy Not to Return, Franco Says in Letter to Brother Here.

Gen. Francisco Franco, leader of the rebels in Spain's civil war, in a letter received here yesterday, outlined his plans in the event of victory. He and his followers, he said, hope to establish a military dictatorship "until order is restored," and then set up a corporative state modeled after Mussolini's Italy.

Gen. Franco stated emphatically that the monarchy would not be restored.

The letter was received by the rebel generalissimo's brother, Maj. Ramon Franco, air attache of the Spanish Embassy, and it was all that the latter needed to make his own plans.

Maj. Franco said he was leaving within two weeks to fight for the rebel cause in Spain. That the young flier, a hero in the overthrow of King Alfonso, had tendered his resignation as an attache of the embassy was reported yesterday in The Post. At the same time, it was stated he was withholding a decision as to his plans until he heard from his brother.

Maj. Franco announced receipt of his brother's letter at a tea and reception he and Senora de Franco gave at their Chevy Chase home.

Asked whether his political views had undergone a change since he was imprisoned for his activities with Spanish republican groups, Maj. Franco said:

"Not exactly. Although I now join with the Fascists, I still remain with the Left in my sympathies. What I want most of all, however, is order in Spain. This the Leftist Party during its regime did not seem able to maintain."

Maj. Franco apparently is optimistic over the outcome of the war. He said he hoped to return here with his wife and young daughter in two or three months.

Meanwhile, he revealed, the Franco home, with its furniture, will be rented.

Among the guests at the tea were Senor Juan Terrasa, commercial attache of the Spanish Embassy, an avowed loyalist; Col. and Mrs. Alexander Consuelo Seoana, Mrs. Maurice Holmes, wife of Gen. Holmes; Maj. Gen. Kenji Matsumoto, military attache of the Japanese Embassy, and Col. and Mrs. Robert Burnett.

Fascists Smash Red Movement In Italian Area

Leaders Seized in Rome; Report Is Denied by the Government.

By the United Press.

Rome, Sept. 10.—It was reported today that the government had discovered and smashed a widespread Communist organization in Italy. The press ministry categorically denied the report.

This version of the reported incident came from a source usually reliable:

Black Shirt agents unearthed and smashed a large red organization with headquarters in Rome and branches at Leghorn, Grossets and other Tuscan towns. Several of the Communist ringleaders held high official posts in the Fascist party.

Workmen Seized.

In addition to officials of the red organization, several scores of workmen allegedly identified as Communists were arrested. All of the ringleaders were confined in the Regina Coeli Jail in Rome.

Preparations were made for a speedy trial. Great secrecy surrounded details as to how the government discovered and smashed the organization. The identity of many of the arrested persons was uncertain and their exact number unknown.

It is known, however, that the Red organization was exposed by OVRA—a voluntary organization for the repression of anti-Fascist movements. As soon as the presence of Communists in Italy became known, the OVRA immediately raided the Red headquarters in Rome.

Wore Red Necktie.

The Communist activities were given away by a young bricklayer who was arrested because he wore a red necktie. Eventually he confessed that he was a member of a Communist group. He gave precise information as to location of the Communist headquarters.

The raided Communist headquarters were located in the San Giovanni district of Rome. It is largely a working class area. Police found a detailed list of members, a large amount of money and thousands of leaflets. Many leaflets, containing Red doctrines, had been distributed among the workers in the Terni Iron Works and in Tuscan towns which were known for their Communist tendencies before and immediately after the Fascist advent to power in 1922.

It was reported no evidence was found in the photographs which warranted further detention.

Worthless $10,000 Bill Found by Woman

Sea Bright, N. J., Sept. 10 (AP).—Mrs. William Worth, of Highlands, picked up what appeared to be a piece of colored paper from the sidewalk yesterday, looked it over, and decided she had found a $1,000 bill. She looked it over again and discovered it was a $10,000 bill.

Then she learned it was worthless because it was a canceled gold certificate.

The note was issued by the Treasury for the convenience of Federal Reserve banks, and local bankers said they did not know how it got outside. They said such a note would never be held by an individual.

They forwarded it to Washington.

WASHINGTON ACCLAIMS HAMILTON HOTEL

Washington, D. C., Sept. 11.—Richard S. Butler, manager of the Hamilton Hotel, declared today that the Fourteenth street hostelry had finished its most successful summer season. Indications show, he added, that the hotel will have equally popular fall and winter sessions.

Factors in the success of the hotel are many, Mr. Butler pointed out: the hotel is completely air-conditioned for health and comfort; prices are extremely moderate for rooms as well as for food, wine and entertainment in the hotel's Coffee Shop, Dining Room, and famed Rainbow Room; parking is free for guests of the hotel and Rainbow Room, and, as is well known, the atmosphere of the hotel is most pleasant and congenial.

With this imposing array of offerings the hotel has justly become Washington's most popular gathering place.

Toll in Rioting Over Palestine Is Placed at 340

Losses Since April 19 Are Put at $13,750,000; 2,000 Arrested.

(Copyright, 1936, by the Jewish Telegraph Agency.)

Jerusalem, Sept. 10. — Figures compiled from official, semiofficial and private sources today gave a picture of the devastation wrought in the Holy Land in 21 weeks of the Arab-Jewish disorders.

The death toll, including 40 persons killed in Wednesday's battles, is placed at 340. Included are 34 British soldiers, officers and policemen; 81 Jews and 225 Arabs.

Wounded number 1,060, including 144 Britons, 276 Jews and 640 Arabs.

Total financial losses since April 19 are put at $13,750,000.

Insurance companies estimate Jewish losses at $7,500,000 and losses to Arabs at $4,000,000, while government damage is estimated at $2,250,000.

Property destruction is classified as follows:

280 cases of arson.
48 bridges blown up.
300 cases of telephone wire cutting.
32 derailments of trains.
180 acts of sabotage.

Collective fines were imposed on 28 towns and villages, including the Jewish settlement of Achuza Herbert Samuel, named after Palestine's first high commissioner. The fines totaled $90,000, the highest of which was assessed against the City of Nablus, for $25,000. (Nablus has been placed under a 19-hour day and night curfew until the fine is paid.)

Curfew was clamped on 11 localities.

The authorities arrested a total of 2,000 Arabs, 40 per cent of whom were tried and convicted under the emergency regulations.

Concentration camps held 420 Arabs, many of them among the most prominent leaders in the country. (A number of them have since been released.)

Police recorded a total of 430 Arab bomb explosions.

Four hundred bombs were confiscated by the authorities.

Thirty-five tons of rifles and ammunition were seized from Arab rebels.

$7,500 Is Raised By Janis Auction

Tarrytown, N. Y., Sept. 10 (AP).—A four-day auction sale of the possessions of Elsie Janis was concluded tonight and the actress who was known as the "sweetheart of the A. E. F." prepared to "camp in the attic" of her two-and-a-half-century-old mansion.

Proceeds of the sale, estimated at approximately $7,500, will be turned over to charity after Miss Janis' debts have been paid. The actress said she wished to dispose of her belongings so that she could start a new career of "living to make others happy."

Asserting there was "lots of stuff left," she said she would hold a private sale tomorrow for residents of Tarrytown. R. E. Manley, Hartford auctioneer, said only a few large pieces of furniture remained.

Miss Janis planned to fly to Denver next week to appear at the V. F. W. encampment. Later she will go to Cleveland for the national convention of the American Legion.

Mrs. Sheehan Dies; Welfare Leader

Mrs. Endora Sheehan, 76, for years prominent in welfare work in the District, died yesterday at the home of a son, John R. Sheehan, in New York City.

Born in Independence, Ky., in 1860, Mrs. Sheehan came to Washington soon after the death of her husband early in 1918, just one month before one of her sons, Lieut. William A. Sheehan, sailed for France.

Lieut. Sheehan, a graduate of Georgetown University, class of 1913, and editor of the Doomsday Book there during his student days, was killed in action at the Battle of Montfaucon, in the Meuse-Argonne, September 28, 1918.

Mrs. Sheehan was a past State gold star chairman of the District chapter of the American War Mothers. She gave most of her time in service to disabled veterans and their dependents.

Surviving Mrs. Sheehan is the son at whose home she died. Funeral services will be held at his home in New York this afternoon.

Their Ancient Sleep Disturbed

William D. Markley and J. R. Floyd display a heap of human bones dug up yesterday by excavators on the new Bolling Field. It is believed the remains are those of Indians or even prehistoric people.

buried their dead—three at a time—in shallow graves. With each discovery, it was found the bodies had been buried one atop the other.

It was evident that many of those buried on the site had met violent deaths. In one instance, a skull had been punctured near the base of the neck with what appeared to be a sharp instrument. Another head apparently had been crushed.

Unique In Formation.

The skulls are unique in formation, each with low foreheads and deep-set eye sockets. Large bones protrude over each eye. From these bones, the skull tapers back, making the top almost flat.

Large, protuding jaw bones—long since detached from the skulls—also were unearthed in each grave. One held four teeth in a perfect state of preservation. There were no signs of dental work, strengthening the theory of an ancient race.

First discoveries were made by George G. Davies, superintendent of construction work for the War Department. He said that when the bones first began to appear in truck loads of dirt, they were believed to be the remains of horses known to have been buried in the section.

This belief was blasted by the discovery of human skulls, he said, and the District coroner's office was notified. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said he believed the remains to be those of Indians who inhabitated the section.

The last known burying ground in this section dates back to 1885, Health Department records showed.

Mrs. Margaret Leimbach Dies at Her Home Here

Mrs. Margaret Leimbach, 80, of 513 Allison street northwest, died yesterday at her home. She had been a resident of Washington nearly all her life.

Mrs. Leimbach was the widow of William Leimbach, a baker, who died seven years ago. She leaves no close relatives.

Funeral services will be held at St. Gabriel's Church at 9 a. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Japan, Allies To Fight Soviet, Paper Charges

Occupation of North China One Step in Advance, Dispatch Says.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Sept. 10.—A charge that Japanese troops and their allies already are on the march in the Far East in preparation for a "big war" against the Soviet Republic was contained in a Pravda dispatch from Ulan Bator today.

The authoritative newspaper asserted strategy of the Japanese embraces another occupation of North China coincident with penetration of Inner Mongolia.

"The aim of this aggression is not only to further occupation of Chinese territory but in preparation for a big war against the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

"The first task in the present stage by the Japanese is to surround the Mongolian peoples of the republic."

Reports from Khabarovsk alleged 21 Soviets were held incommunicado in jail at Harbin, charged with espionage and subjected to cruelties despite repeated demands of consul generals for legal treatment of the prisoners.

Tropical Storm Forms To East of Puerto Rico

Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 10 (AP).—Another tropical storm is forming in the Atlantic Ocean east of Puerto Rico. The Weather Bureau said today the new disturbance was central at midmorning about 800 to 900 miles east southeast of Puerto Rico and probably is moving west northwestward.

Forecasters had little information about the storm's intensity or its course but warned ships east of the Leeward Islands to use care during the next 24 hours. A tropical disturbance reported east northeast of Puerto Rico Labor Day blew itself out at sea.

SERGT. ARTHUR M. GIBBONS.

Sergt. Gibbons Funeral Service Set Tomorrow

White House Policeman Died Taking Shower; On Force 12 Years.

Funeral services for Sergt. Arthur M. Gibbons, of the White House police, who died of heart disease yesterday while taking a shower in the basement of the Executive Offices, will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. in the Fifth Baptist Church, followed by burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Sergt. Gibbons, who was 43 and lived at 410 Ingraham street northwest, apparently had been in the best of health. He was found on the floor of the shower room shortly after calling the roll of his force.

Efforts of the fire rescue squad to revive him failed, and he was pronounced dead by an Emergency Hospital physician.

A native of Washington, Sergt. Gibbons had been on the White House force 12 years, the last six of which he had been a sergeant.

For eight years before this he had been a member of the Metropolitan force, attached to the First Precinct. His brother, Elmer Gibbons, is with the Harbor Precinct.

Two months ago Sergt. and Mrs. Gibbons celebrated their silver wedding anniversary.

Besides his widow, Sergt. Gibbons is survived by two daughters, Mildred and Katherine; a son, A. M. Gibbons, jr.; two brothers, Elmer and Thomas R. Gibbons, and two sisters, Viola and Grace Gibbons.

Inquiry by U.S. Slated Monday In Ships' Crash

Only Dozen of 261 Hurt; Captain to Cite Fog as Collision's Cause.

By the United Press.

Boston, Sept. 10.—Capt. Adelbert Wickens, 47-year-old mariner, will try to convince a Federal board of inquiry next Monday that the near-disastrous collision between the S. S. New York and his excursion steamer Romance in Boston's outer harbor resulted from impenetrable fog and was unavoidable.

The battered pilot house of the Romance was sighted adrift off Nahant today and Coast Guards prepared to dynamite it as a menace to navigation. The rest of the 38-year-old steamer lay in 66 feet of water near the Graves buoy, where she sank last night five minutes after the last of her 208 passengers and 34 crew members had been taken off by ladder or lifeboat.

A dozen persons, mostly seamen of the Romance, nursed minor hurts, but Coast Guards considered it little short of miraculous that all 261 men, women and children were rescued during the brief 20 minutes that elapsed between the crash and the foundering of the smaller vessel.

Capt. Wickens, father of seven children, already was battling negligence charges filed against him by a rival steamship company at the time of the accident. He had just begun testifying before the local inspectors of the U. S. Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation today when the hearing suddenly was postponed until Monday.

D. C. Couple on Ship.

Among those who boarded the last lifeboat to escape from the steamer Romance, rammed and sunk by the coastwise steamer New York near Boston Wednesday, were Felix Mahoney, Washington artist and director of the National School of Fine and Applied Arts, and Mrs. Mahoney.

They had been vacationing at the famous art colony at Provincetown, Mass. at the tip of Cape Cod, and are planning to return to Washington next week.

Mahoney sent telegrams to his friends, stating both he and Mrs. Mahoney came through the harrowing experience safely.

Strike Compromise Frees Dollar Liner

San Francisco, Sept. 10 (AP).—Amid cheers from 460 passengers, the Dollar liner President Hoover sailed today for the Orient, six days late because of a labor dispute, compromised only after it had threatened to embroil the entire waterfront.

With a hastily recruited deck crew, the liner got away shortly after noon, leaving behind it two issues still to be settled by Government agencies.

Under the compromise the liner sailed without Charles Brenner, Sailors Union representative and center of the controversy. It also required waterfront employes to resume negotiations with the union for a new working agreement replacing that which ended the bloody 1934 maritime strike.

The settlement provided that the Government would decide whether the Dollar Line, which fired Brenner, had discriminated against him.

53 Held in Fraud At Atlantic City

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 10 (AP).—Prosecutor Joseph Altman said today the Atlantic County grand jury had returned indictments against 53 persons charged with violation of the election laws at the city commission election last May.

Fifty-one members of the city's district election boards were among those indicted, Altman said.

Among those listed in the indictments were: Miss Helen Muller, secretary to Mayor C. D. White; Joseph Mulholland, deputy sheriff; Miss Reba Marcus, a clerk in the county treasurer's office; Edward C. Walsh, an employe of the city water department; Francis Malia, a fireman; Alfred Seidel, rolling chair concessionaire; Frank Bennet, a saloonkeeper, and Edmund Kite, a beach patrol captain.

Twenty-six of those indicted were listed as Republicans, and 25 as Democrats.

The indictments came as a climax in a crusade by young William B. Shields to "clean up" Atlantic City.

Death Reveals Marriage

LUCILLE OGDEN WILSON.

Death Divides Young Couple Wed in Secret

Lucille Ogden, Providence Nurse, Dies in Hospital Which Employed Her.

A bride and bridegroom, whose marriage early last spring had been a carefully guarded secret, yesterday were parted by death.

Lucille Ogden, 26-year-old Providence Hospital nurse, who was wed to John Wilson, 28, of 3226 Walbridge place, in a private ceremony at Elkton, Md., last March, died yesterday of an ailment that confined her as a patient at the institution where she worked.

She became ill a week ago, and her bridegroom, known only as her fiance, was constantly at her bedside as life ebbed.

Feared Loss of Job.

When she became Mrs. Wilson, Lucille Ogden was afraid if her marriage became known she would lose her job at Providence.

Nurses there are not permitted to continue work—except in response to personal requests by patients—after marriage.

So she and her young husband planned and saved for the day when they might have their own apartment, and together bought furnishings for the home they were to share together. Wilson, an employe of the Resettlement Administration, is a native of Punxsutawney, Pa., as was his bride.

Listed as Miss Ogden.

Wilson's real identity became known at the hospital only after his wife had died. Her name had last appeared on the hospital register as Miss Ogden.

About a month ago the couple had been remarried in a ceremony recognized by the Roman Catholic Church, of which Miss Ogden was a member. She came to Washington about five years ago and studied nursing at the Providence Hospital School for Nurses, of which she was a graduate.

Her sister, Miss Eunice Ogden, also is attached to the nursing staff of Providence.

Wilson accompanied his wife's body to Punxsutawney last night.

Jews Linked to Bolshevists; Continent's Survival Held in Jeopardy.

siveness of the Red army and described a long list of Red atrocities in Spain.

"Germany is a peaceful island amidst all this turmoil," he said. "Germany is peaceful because we defeated bolshevism, because we opposed it with better ideals and because our natoni rose against Jewry and its allied, racially inferior gangsterdom.

"Hitler was the champion in this fight.

"The German people may rest assured that the party and the army will safeguard Germany. Both obey the orders of one man who stands before us as the sentinel of his own people and as the first man of a better, truer, nobler and happier Europe."

Before Goebbels' address Hitler made a speech before a capacity crowd of 70,000 which filled the white sandstone grandstands surrounding the rectangular Zeppelin meadow. He reviewed 50,000 members of the labor corps who filed past in nine marching "columns shouldering gleaming steel shovels.

"The spade has become the new symbol of civil life," Hitler said in speaking before the labor corps—the soldiers of tomorrow.

"Where Marxism fights for power there is destruction and civil class strife," Hitler said in reference to Spain. "Instead of tearing you apart I have welded you together. You are the bearers of our faith."

Before Goebbels spoke, Alfred Rosenberg, the Nazis foremost philosopher, told a plenary session of the congress that Jewry and bolshevism are one entity and cannot be separated. In an attempt to prove his point he read a list of Jews in leading positions in the Soviet Russian government. According to the list seven Russians, three Armenians and 16 Jews direct the foreign affairs of Russia.

"Among the Jews is the odious Litvinoff (Soviet Commissar for Foreign Affairs Maxim Litvinoff), who was expelled from London several years ago for fraudulent business practices," Rosenberg said.

Rosenberg admitted that Dictator Josef Stalin is not a Jew.

"But neither is he a Russian," he said. "He is a Caucasian. The paramount thing is that he is guided and directed by his father-in-law, the Jew, Kaganovich Mosessohn."

"The so-called decent Jews known to all people are really border cases," Rosenberg said. "In reality, they are also Bolshevists, because the Bolshevist ideology is pertinent to the Jewish mentality.

"Communism, when it cannot win immediately, establishes a popular front and sings the "Marseillaise," as in France, in an attempt to form another Kerensky cabinet as the first step toward the Bolshevist terror, like that in Madrid, Barcelono and Moscow."

Warns Germany.

Moscow, Sept. 10 (AP).—Official Soviet sources, declaring "we have no plans so far to recall our ambassador to Berlin," warned Germany in veiled fashion today it must not go too far in anti-Bolshevist polemics.

These sources let it be known Moscow was watching the Nazi Party convention at Nurnberg closely in the belief Adolf Hitler was preparing to "spring another surprise" on Europe.

Headless Body Found in Ohio; Sixth in Year

Cleveland Police Assert Last Killing Resembles Five Predecessors.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Sept. 10.—Kingsbury Run, a small stream which wanders through the southeast section of Cleveland, yielded today the sixth headless body found in the city within the last year.

Like the others, the body—that of a man—had been cut, detectives said, with a skillful hand. The torso had been sliced in two pieces. The head was not found.

Firemen with grappling hooks attempted unsuccessfully to find the missing head in the pond where the torso was found. A blood-stained shirt, wrapped in a Tuesday morning newspaper, was found on a nearby culvert.

Detective Sergt. James Hogan, of the homicide squad, said the body bore marks familiar to investigators of the five previous decapitations. Three of the other five bodies were found close to Kingsbury Run.

The first two victims were found in September, 1935, at the foot of Jackass Hill, near the stream. The heads were buried in sand nearby. One of the victims was identified as Edward A. Andrasy, 28. No motive for his killing ever was established.

The other body, that of a man about 40, has not been identified. Andrasy's wrists were chafed; apparently he had been tied.

Last January the torso of a woman was found in two bushel baskets in an East Side vacant lot, not far from the downtown area. The body was identified through fingerprints as that of Mrs. Florence Polilla, 41. Mrs. Polilla was once arrested in a vice raid.

Located by Two Boys.

Two boys playing hookey from school in June found the head of a man under a sumac tree in a gully off Kingsbury Run. The torso was found next day in a scrubby spot nearby. The body was never identified.

In July a girl walking through a wooded West Side gully stumbled on the nude and headless body of the fifth victim, a man. The head was found 40 feet away wrapped in a coat. The man could not be identified.

Detectives pointed to the clean work of decapitation in each instance. All the bodies, except that of Mrs. Polilla, were found near railroad tracks.

Coroner A. J. Pearse said the body found today bore no marks which might aid in identification.

Holt's Hat in Ring.

Richmond, Sept. 10 (AP).—State Senator Saxon W. Holt, of Newport News, said here today that he still intends to run for lieutenant governor in 1937, and added: "And I will win."

Downtown Blaze Attracts Throng, Burns Man

Fred Burrhys, 54, of Hyattsville, Md., was in a serious condition in Emergency Hospital last night from burns suffered in an explosion and fire in the engraving department of the Acme Printing Co., 708 Thirteenth street northwest. Seven employes were driven from the building by smoke and flames after attempting to quell the fire with extinguishers. Hundreds of shoppers and office workers thronged the street for two blocks on either side of the burning building, hampering the work of firemen and blocking traffic for more than an hour. Company officials estimated the loss at $2,000.

Hearst Counsel Loses Motion In Guild Battle

Court Refuses to Quash Complaint in Seattle Against Daily.

By the Associated Press.

Seattle, Sept. 10.—Attorneys representing the Hearst Publications fought unsuccessfully today before a National Labor Relations Board examiner for dismissal of the American Newspaper Guild's complaint against the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

At the outset of a hearing in which the Guild seeks reinstatement of two Post-Intelligencer staff members dismissed before the August 13 newsroom strike, Hearst counsel also resisted attempts to show the newspaper was engaged in interstate commerce.

Examiner Edwin S. Smith overruled a motion to quash the complaint on the ground that notice of the case had not been properly served on the newspaper owner, William Randolph Hearst.

Smith also denied a move to dismiss on the ground that it would be futile to order reinstatement of the two men because neither could work harmoniously with "loyal employes" and because the strike of guildsmen had closed their place of employment.

Still another motion asking dismissal on the ground that the complaint did not apply to all respondents and that the Post-Intelligencer was not engaged in interstate commerce was denied by Smith.

A challenge by Hearst counsel of the validity of the act under which the Labor Relations Board operates drew from Robert Watts, Labor Relations Board attorney the remark:

"I'm getting tired of going around the country hearing these charges. The act has been tested and approved in the Supreme Court."

Watts is prosecuting the American Newspaper Guild's complaint that the Post-Intelligencer, a morning daily, discharged two longtime employes, Philip Everhardt Armstrong, drama critic, and Frank M. (Slim) Lynch, photographer, for guild activities. The paper, refusing to recognize the guild, contended the men were dismissed for cause.

German Plane Reaches N. Y. In Azores Mail Route Survey

Huge Diesel-Powered Flying Boat 'Zephyr' Reaches America After 22-Hour Flight to Establish Commercial Line.

By the United Press.

Port Washington, N. Y., Sept. 10. The 10-ton Dornier flying boat Zephyr, burning oil for fuel and blazing the trail across the north Atlantic for a commercial air-mail route, landed at the Pan-American Airways Marine Base here at 6:17 p. m. (E. D. T.), completing the first nonstop flight from the Azores.

At the controls of the 78-foot German monoplane was Flight Capt. J. Blankenburg, who lifted the craft off the deck of the S. S. Schabenland at 8:10 p. m. (E. D. T.) last night, 100 miles out of Horta, the Azores, and 2,390 miles from New York.

With a crew of four, the plane made the flight in 22 hours 7 minutes. Averaging only slightly more than 100 miles an hour, the Diesel-powered, all-metal flying boat battled strong headwinds, rain squalls and fog most of the way.

The ship was in constant radio communication with the marine base here with Radio Operator W. Ehlberg in charge of communication on the plane. Others of the crew were Co-Pilot K. A. Baron von Gablenz and Flight Mechanic A. Eger.

Sponsored by the German Corporation, Deutsche Lufthansa, the flight was the first of a series aimed to survey conditions over the North Atlantic trade route for the air mail service. Pan-American, British Imperial Airways and Air France are co-operating.

At noon today the Zephyr, powered with two 500-horsepower Diesel engines, left its course to circle over the German steamer Europa. It wobbled its wings in a salute and the steamer replied with a blast from its whistle. It was then 700 miles from New York.

Tonight at midnight the sister ship of the Zephyr, the Aeolus, was launched from the Schwaben-land on its second attempt. The Aeolus was 600 miles toward Bermuda Wednesday when a leak developed in its cooling system and it turned back. The Aeolus will stop at Bermuda before continuing north.

In Business for Himself

Earning Money to Pay for His Clothes and Education—Help Him Succeed by Paying Him Promptly!

THE N. B. A. boy who brings the news of the world to your home every day, is not paid a salary, but is an ambitious young newspaper merchant, in business for himself.

He buys his papers at wholesale and sells them at the low weekly rate. The small difference is his profit. Each new subscriber he obtains, adds to his income. Every one he loses, reduces his earnings. Every person who neglects to pay him, not only deprives him of his rightful profit, but makes him bear the cost of the unpaid papers. For, he must settle his newspaper bill in full EVERY week.

Serving a newspaper route is his way of earning money to help meet family expenses, buy his clothes and books, pay for his schooling and sports, take a business-college course, or build up his bank account so he can get a university education.

Aside from the money he earns, his newspaper route gives him a splendid start toward a successful career. As a member of the N. B. A., he is pledged to be honest, reliable and loyal; to be prompt, courteous and business-like; and he is encouraged to perform all his duties faithfully.

Leaders From 43 States to Meet in Chicago and N. Y. Conferences.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 10.—Republican headquarters today called two special meetings of party chieftains from 43 States for the announced purpose of "considering activities for the remainder of the campaign."

National committeemen and committeewomen, State chairmen and women vice chairmen, and party secretaries from 26 Western States will gather in Chicago Monday. Those from 17 Eastern States were called to a New York City session Thursday.

In addition, all State leaders of the Young Republican organization, the Service Men's Republican League and State leaders of other groups engaged in State-wide political work under direction of the party were invited to sit in at the two meetings.

"This unusual series of meetings is being held so that the various groups from the various States may confer regarding organization programs and to consider campaign activities for the remainder of the campaign to elect Gov. Landon and Col. Knox," said the announcement of the meetings made at the national committee offices here. It was signed by Harrison E. Spangler as executive vice chairman of the committee.

The telegrams sent to the party workers were signed by Spangler and the Republican campaign head, National Chairman John Hamilton.

Other spokesmen said an exchange of reports on the campaign was planned both at the meeting here and in New York, which was announced for the party's city headquarters there.

Members of the national committee staff, who will attend the meetings, said at least 100 party stalwarts were expected for the Chicago meeting with probably as many at New York.

Republican officials also disclosed that the visit of Gov. Alfred M. Landon here tomorrow en route to the Maine political battlefield will be utilized as an opportunity for Chicago ward and State party leaders to meet him. He will be in Chicago about five hours Friday, going directly to the home of George F. Harding, Illinois national committeeman, and remaining there until shortly before train time at 3 p. m., Eastern standard time.

President Hails U. S. Prosperity In N. C. Speech

our small business men, so are most of our corporations and so are almost all of our municipal and county and State governments."

History also will record, he said, that "individuals and corporations and governments are paying today a far more reasonable rate of interest than at any previous time in the history of the American Republic."

"In the process of attaining these successful ends," he asserted, "individual liberties have not been removed, and inherent rights of the sovereign States have not been invaded.

"It was obvious, of course, because of the economic unity of the entire country, that no group of individuals and no individual States could, by themselves, take the action necessary to restore the purchasing power of the Nation. Only the Federal Government could accomplish that."

The President said if history gives a name to the present age he hoped it would "call this the era of rebuilding—for it is my firm conviction that unless we, in our generation, start to rebuild, the Americans of a century hence will have lost the greater part of their natural and national heritage."

At another point Mr. Roosevelt referred to bad times as "that now historic corner."

Text of President's Charlotte Address

By the Associated Press.

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 10.—Following is the text of President Roosevelt's address here today:

Green pastures—what a memory those words call forth. In all our schooling, in every part of the land, no matter to what church we happen to belong, the Twenty-third Psalm is, in all probability better known to men, women and children than any other poem in the English language.

And in this great lyric, what do we best remember?

Two lines:

"He maketh me to lie down in green pastures;

"He leadeth me beside the still waters."

It does not greatly matter whether that symbol of an ideal of human physical and spiritual happiness was written in its original 3,000 or 5,000 or 10,000 years ago. It might have been written as well in the twentieth century of the Christian era.

Have you ever stopped to think that happiness is most often described in terms of the simple ways of nature rather than in the complex ways of man's fabrications? Perhaps it is because peace is necessary to ultimate happiness. Perhaps, therefore, when we seek a symbol of happiness, we do not go to the rush of crowded city streets or to the hum of machinery to find the simile.

The ancient psalmist did not use the parable of the merchant's camel train or the royal palace or the crowded bazaar. He had, as we have, the problems of competing trade, of social crowding, and I venture to suggest that long before the Christian era, the ancient civilizations of the East were confronted with problems of social economics which, though small in point of human numbers and small in point of worldly goods, were still, by comparison, as potent in their effect and as difficult in their solution as the extraordinarily similar problems of social economics that face us in this century.

Be it remembered then, that the ancient kings and prophets reverted, just as we do today, to the good earth and the still waters when they idealized security of the body and mind.

Still Waters.

A recent writer has suggested that the present President of the United States, because of birth and training and natural proclivity, inevitably reverts to terms of land and water in his approach to any great public problem. I fear that I must plead guilty to this charge—though I do so with the reservation that this is in spite of thhe fact that during the greater part of my life I have been in far closer contact with the more exciting and more highly competitive give and take of the profession of the law, the practice of business and the exactions of public service.

Green pastures—millions of our fellow Americans, with whom I have been associated in the past fortnight, out on the Great Plains of America, live with prayers and hopes for the fulfillment of what those words imply. Still waters—millions of other Americans, with whom I also have associated, live with prayers and hopes either that the floods may be stilled—floods that bring with them destruction and disaster to fields and flocks, to homesteads and cities—or else look for the heaven-sent rains that will fill their wells, their ponds and their peaceful streams.

Many years ago, I talked with a learned man about this continent—what it was like when the white man came. I asked him, "Were the Great Plains, which extend hundreds of miles upon hundreds of miles from the Rockies near to the Mississippi, always bare of trees, always the pasturage of great waves of bison and millions of antelope?" "Yes," he replied, "for many hundreds of years before the white man came, but it is my belief that trees could have grown and still could grow on those plains, but that they were prevented from doing so by the constant succession of prairie fires, some of them set by lightning and some of them by the red men."

I asked him whether the streams of the Southland were always brown before our white ancestors moved in. He replied, "No, in in those earlier days, during the greater part of the year, the Southern rivers were clear streams, except in the springtime, when they had many freshets and floods, just as we do. When that occurred, soil was washed from the uplands and the mountains into the Atlantic Ocean, but because they were seasonal only in their effect the natural accretion of new topsoil took the place of that which had run off to the sea."

Era of Rebuilding.

If history gives a name to the age in which we are living, I hope it will call this era of rebuilding—for it is my firm conviction that unless, in our generation, we start to rebuild, the Americans of a century hence will have lost the greater part of their natural and national heritage.

It is because in these latter years I have spent so great a part of my life in this Southland, and because I have come to know its fine people, its brave history, its many problems, that I speak not as a stranger to you who are gathered here from the seven States.

I have seen the denuding of your forests; I have seen the washing away of your topsoil; I have struggled through the red clay roads in the springtime. I have taken part in your splendid efforts to save your forests, to terrace your lands, to harness your streams and to push hard-surfaced roads into every county in every State. I have even assumed the amazing role of a columnist for a Georgia newspaper that I might write powerful pieces against burning over the farm woodlots in favor of the cow, hog and bean program.

May I add that it is because of practical experience on my own farm that many years before I was inaugurated President I came to the conclusion that cotton, as it stood then, was essentially a speculative crop and that the planter of cotton, because he had nothing to say about the price he would receive, could never tell when he put the seed in the ground whether he would make a big profit by selling his crop for 25 cents a pound or go broke by selling his crop for 5 cents a pound.

It is perhaps a bit of history hitherto unrecorded that in the month of March, 1933, I said this to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace:

"In respect to cotton, I have a definite objective: The cotton farmer has been cursed for a generation by the fact of insecurity. The price for his crop has run up the scale and down the scale and up the scale and down the scale again. In recent years his total aggregate production has been so great that 13,000,000 bales overhang the market. He will starve on 5 cent cotton—the South will starve on 5-cent cotton—and just as long as this appalling carryover hangs over the market, he will never get a price that will even bring him out whole. My objective is to control and reduce that surplus: To get for him 10-cent cotton our first year in office and to get him 12-cent cotton or more for the next three years. You and I must keep that goal ever before our eyes." And, my friends, I ask you in simple fairness, have we attained that goal?

Goal of Government.

You know the story of cotton. You know the story of tobacco, too. There again your National Government had a goal. I don't believe that the great tobacco growing States of the Nation would wish to go back to the days of "everyman for himself and let the devil take the hindmost."

Again, long before I went to Washington, I was convinced that the long road that leads to green pastures and still waters had to begin with a reasonable prosperity. It seemed axiomatic to me that a cotton farmer who could get only 5 cents a pound for his crop could not be in a position properly to fertilize his land, or to terrace it, or to rotate his crops, or to keep a cow or a few head of cattle, or to plant a little orchard, or to cultivate a garden—in other words, to work out for himself and his family a well-rounded, reasonably secure life that would tide him over a lean year of drought.

The same thing held true, I thought, in the case of the farmer whose principal crop was tobacco or whose principal crop was peaches or whose principal crop was corn.

In other words, we could not go ahead to the next step in the prevention of soil erosion throughout the South, to the transfer of thin pastures into forests and submarginal plowed land into pastures and trees, and the use of many modern methods to stop soil erosion and to prevent floods until the farmers of the Southland were able to make a reasonably decent living out of their main crops.

Today, because of better prices for farm commodities, we are actually and actively engaged in taking these second steps. Not only have we aroused public understanding and approval of the need of ending soil erosion and water run-off, but we have enabled the public, through a practical prosperity, to begin to pay their debts, to paint their houses, to buy farm tools and automobiles, to send more boys and girls through school and college, to put some money in the bank and incidentally to know for the first time that the money in the bank is safe.

Applies to All.

So much for the green pastures and the still waters in their more literal physical terms. Those ancient words apply, however, with equal force to men and women and children. Your life and mine, though we work in the mill or in the office or in the store, can still be a life in green pastures and beside still waters.

No man or woman, no family, can hope in any part of the country, to attain security in a city of starvation crop prices. I do not have to tell you, who live in any of these Southern States, which have factories in all of them, that a family that tries to subsist on a total wage income of $400 a year is just as much a drag on the prosperity of America as the farm family that seeks to subsist on a yearly cash income of $100. That is why most thinking people believe that the national recovery act, during its short term of life, accomplished as much for the restoration of prosperity through the establishment of the minimum wage, the shortening of hours and the elimination of child labor, as any law put on the statue books of the Federal Government in the past century.

In the summer of 1934, the head of one of the great mail order houses said to me, "Do you remember me telling you, in 1933, that the purchasing power of the South has dropped to almost zero? Look at this report of our sales in all the Southern States. All of our sales have increased, but those in the South have come back faster than any, and the reason is that the South at last has secured purchasing power."

Finally you and I have come in this fourth year of definite upturn to appreciate another significant and inevitable result. We live under three kinds of government—and to all three, we as citizens, pay taxes. Our local and State taxes, mainly on real estate, go to the support of local and State functions of government, such as schools, city and county administrations, water supply, sewer systems, street lighting, peace officers and State institutions. Our Federal taxes, none of which are on real estate, come in the form of tobacco and similar excises, and income, inheritance and corporation taxes and are spent in the running of the Federal Government, for national defense, pensions, forests, parks, highways, public works and relief for the unemployed.

Tax Receipts Tumble.

Four years ago all of us in every part of the United States, found that without any change in the local or State tax schedules, the tax receipts had fallen off to an alarming degree. The result was that counties and municipalities and States were failing to balance their budgets or else were unable to carry out the ordinary and orderly functions and obligations of State and local government. Schools were being closed or curtailed; teachers were unpaid; roads lacked repairs; the borrowing of money for permanent improvements had become impossible. With the Federal Government, despite additional new forms of taxes, receipts of revenue in 1932 had been cut in half.

The value of those tangible private assets on which taxes were levied had fallen so low that even if the income had been there to pay taxes with, the sums received would have put all forms of Government increasingly in the red. And even when some remnant of value remained on which to levy a tax, the taxpayer did not have the wherewithal to make the payment and was beginning to lose the very property which was taxed.

That is why I go back to the original thesis that any commonsense, logical governmental policy had to begin with the building up of farm and other property values, and crop values, and the increase of workers' wages if that now historic corner was ever to be turned.

History records that only a few years ago farmers were not making both ends meet; workers in factories were not making both ends meet; the small business man was not making both ends meet and the corporation was not making both ends meet. As a logical result, local governments were not making both ends meet and neither were State governments and neither was the National Government.

Many Back in "Black."

Incidentally, as another result, the individual who had to borrow, the corporation which had to borrow and the Government which had to borrow—all were compelled to pay unconscionable and ruinous interest charges.

History will also record that by the year 1936 a very much larger number of individuals are back in the black. So are most of our small business men, so are most of our corporations and so are almost all of our municipal and county and State governments.

History will also record that individual and corporations and governments are paying today a far more reasonable rate of interest than at any previous time in the history of the American republic.

In the process of attaining these successful ends, individual liberties have not been removed, and inherent rights of the sovereign States have not been invaded.

It was obvious, of course, because of the economic unity of the entire country that no group of individuals and no individual States could, by themselves, take the action necessary to restore the purchasing power of the Nation. Only the Federal Government could accomplish that.

I speak to you today as common-sense American men and women. You will agree that from the material aspect, this Nation's consuming power has been rapidly restored. I trust that you will likewise agree that better conditions on the farms, in the factories and in the home of America are leading us to the spiritual figure of the Psalmist—green pastures and still waters.

The Sun Dissents.

The announcement of the Baltimore Sun that it cannot support President Roosevelt for re-election constitutes a political factor of major importance. Not only is the Sun a highly respected paper in its own city and State; it also has a reputation of national scope and importance for integrity in both its news and editorial pages.

No one can fail to understand that the editors of this paper did not abandon their party allegiance light-heartedly. Only a high sense of journalistic responsibility could have prevailed upon them to take the position they now assume.

The poll being conducted by the Baltimore Sun of the registered voters of Maryland has, of course, nothing to do with this announcement of policy. To date the figures indicate that President Roosevelt is a favorite in the State of Maryland. The returns conform very closely to the estimates carried in the "America Speaks" poll published in The Post. It will be interesting to observe in later surveys by the Institute of Public Opinion the effect of the announcement just made.

Differences in the viewpoint of the Sun and the Administration are fundamental. Those differences may be best summed up by the statement that where the New Deal has departed from the traditional Democratic position the Sun refuses to follow. That is the sort of courage which is sorely needed in American politics.

Whether or not the Sun will positively and actively support Gov. Landon will depend upon further developments of the campaign. But this decision will not be of major political significance. The effect of the Sun's refusal to support the President will be automatically to strengthen the G. O. P. candidate in Maryland and the country in general.

Key Appointments.

High on the list of offices to be filled by his order, the President will find the five positions on the new Maritime Commission. Under the terms of the act passed by Congress just before adjournment, the commission will exercise the powers and duties of the old Shipping Board now vested in the Department of Commerce. In addition, it will formulate and administer plans for a direct ship subsidy program for construction and operation of merchant marine vessels.

It was not without reason that Congress provided explicitly that members of the commission be selected with "due regard for their special fitness." Success in the effort to raise the American merchant marine from its present low estate demands not only extraordinary ability but complete aloofness from selfish interests on the part of those in authority.

Approximately 150 candidates are reported to have applied for appointment to the commission. Among them, of course, are all manner of men. If the President is wise, however, he will discard without further consideration the many who seek merely an office—any office. But even with this, his task will not be nearly finished. For then he will be faced with the necessity of culling out from the remaining the five most aptly combining experience in shipping with the highest degree of integrity.

Since the Navy should be represented among the five, the President will have a wide range of choice in making his first selection. So, too, plain logic names as the outstanding choice from the Department of Commerce, Joseph B. Weaver, chief of the Bureau of Navigation. And if a Postoffice Department representative is to be named for the short period until subsidies are divorced from mail contracts, that can be quickly and competently filled.

A member to represent the shipping industry, however, will be less easily chosen. And when the President comes to the selection of a representative of labor, he will be facing the most delicate and in some respects the most important decision. One of the paramount aims of the commission is to bring to an abrupt end the constant turmoil in which the seamen's unions are involved. To accomplish this, some one who can command the instant respect and confidence of labor will be required. Assistant Secretary of Labor McGrady has been mentioned for the post. He is precisely the type that is needed. A man of anything less than his ability for handling labor problems might easily discredit the Maritime Commission before its work gets fairly under way.

Politics And Power

Officials and private individuals who have worked so hard to make the third World Power Conference a success must have been sorely chagrined when some of the Americans invited to speak used that gathering as a sounding board for the expression of political views. Morris L. Cooke, chairman of the executive committee in charge of arrangements for the conference, issued a statement deploring this resort to politics in a scientific gathering But the unfortunate impression aroused by this lack of restraint can not be overcome by official apologies.

Because power is a political issue in this country the committee realized that it would be difficult to avoid the exposition of narrow views and partisanship. Consequently, papers prepared for the conference were carefully scrutinized. Where scientific analysis and logical conclusions merged into mere tirades speakers were discreetly asked to amend their manuscripts. The fact that some speakers stooped to emotional propaganda in spite of these precautions is a serious reflection upon their judgment as well as their sense of sportsmanship.

The incident is all the more disheartening because it is indicative of the American attitude toward the so-called "power issue." Instead of calmly analyzing the relative benefits of private and public ownership of electric generating facilities, the advocates of each system tend to see only chaos and destruction in the opposite point of view. The result is too often a struggle for extermination with little thought for the real interests of the public.

This adolescent approach to a major economic problem must be amusing to many of the foreign experts who came to Washington to discuss national power economy in terms of experience and research. Perhaps their attitude is summed up in the remark of John C. Dalton, manager of the County of London Electric Supply, that "private utilities in Great Britain are fortunately free from political violence." To this he added: "Let us, at all costs, keep the politicians away from this business of ours." Even in this country, where the people are accustomed to political extravagance, this childish injection of politics into a scientific gathering can only undermine public confidence in the possibility of solving the power problem by the present method of approach.

The Defeat Of Talmadge.

The defeat in the Georgia primaries of Gov. Talmadge, candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, is another victory for the New Deal in the South. The Governor was a rabid opponent of the Administration. His opponent, Senator Richard B. Russell, on the other hand, pledged his unswerving support to President Roosevelt. He was renominated by an enormous majority. If this should mark the end of Talmadge's political career it would be none too soon.

The same tendency on the part of Democratic voters to defeat candidates who have opposed the New Deal has already been displayed in many other primaries held during recent months in States south of the Mason and Dixon line. But in the case of Talmadge another consideration may have played its part in determining the final outcome of the balloting.

Talmadge was a representative of the seamier side of Southern politics. His rabble-rousing proclivities went even beyond those of Cole Blease, of Tom Watson and of J. Thomas Heflin of more recent memory. To gain a following, as his speeches at the so-called "grass roots" convention held at Macon last January clearly indicated, Talmadge was not averse to arousing the meanest and basest emotions. That gathering revealed the Georgia Governor as a candidate for the mantle of the far abler and shrewder Huey Long. Moreover, it was marked as much by its Ku Kluxery and Hitlerist borrowings as by its rabid anti-New Dealism.

The Senate will be a better place for Talmadge's failure to find a seat there. The Democratic voters of Georgia are to be congratulated for having done the Nation a good turn.

Let There Be Control.

In his annual report, Traffic Director Van Duzer once again points to the need for control of jaywalkers. This makes the third time he has advanced that idea, and not without reason.

He submits that pedestrian control is still Washington's most acute safety problem. To back up his statement, he produces figures showing that almost three-quarters of the traffic fatalities during the past fiscal year were pedestrians—a proportion that varies only slightly from year to year. More than half the persons injured by automobiles were pedestrians, 70 per cent of whom were declared to have been at fault.

Some time ago, Mr. Van Duzer suggested that the District traffic regulations be amended to read that "pedestrians shall obey the directions of police officers." But the Commissioners were cold to the proposal. In accord with the opinion of the corporation counsel, they recently replied that the amendment is unnecessary. The police are already empowered "to control traffic" and "traffic," in the definition of the existing code, includes "vehicles, pedestrians and animals." The Commissioners believe this is sufficient authorization to end all jaywalking.

This reasoning seems sensible. It now remains only for the traffic director and the traffic squad to proceed with their plans—on which the application for an amendment presumably was predicated—to supervise foot traffic more closely. The police have the power to control pedestrians; the pedestrians, patently, ought to be controlled. Even if traffic officials still believe that more specific regulations are desirable, the quickest way to prove their point is to begin regulating pedestrian movements in congested areas. This essential precaution against traffic casualties has already been too long delayed by trifling controversies over the meaning of the law.

Liquidating A Blunder.

Disastrous as the drought has been from the farmer's viewpoint, it has proved a boon in at least one respect to the Department of Agriculture. As a result of the acute shrinkage in the cotton crop due to August weather, the Commodity Credit Corporation expects to liquidate its holdings of that commodity after the first of the year if the market continues favorable. And indications are that the enormous losses which once appeared inevitable may now be substantially reduced.

These cotton holdings are the last of the Government's stock of agricultural commodities to be liquidated. The policy of taking over surplus crops to support prices was initiated when the Farm Board began pegging the price of cotton at around 17 cents per pound. In spite of the consequent fiasco, the present Administration continued this foolish policy by making excessively high commodity loans direct to farmers.

After farmers had become accustomed to price-pegging, the Administration realized its mistake and tried to reduce the amount of future loans. But it was impossible to overcome the political pressure from Southern Senators urged on by their constituents. The result was a compromise which perpetuated all the unwise features of the commodity lending program.

As a matter of sound policy the Government should not be in the business of lending money on commodities to individual farmers. It is on safe ground when it makes every proper provision for credit on reasonable terms as to interest, maturity, etc., but this should be done through existing agencies—country banks, co-operative organizations and other financial institutions having local responsibility and some primary financial liability. If liquidation of the cotton held by the Commodity Credit Corporation could be interpreted as a move in this direction, it would be a most encouraging portend.

Losses resulting from the price-pegging policy will not be fully represented in the final report on the Government's commodity loans operations. By fixing artificial prices and curtailing crops the Administration has surrendered to other countries a considerable part of the export markets formerly supplied by American cotton. These markets will not be easily regained. The maneuvers which thus narrowed the outlets for our cotton while the Administration was reducing the gold content of the dollar, presumably to stimulate exports, constitute one of the major absurdities of the New Deal.

Boots And Shoes.

Anglo-Saxon solidarity has seldom been better illustrated than by the New York newspapers' treatment of the hundred English schoolboys who are passing part of a vacation in that metropolis. Upon retiring, on the night of their arrival, each of these young fellows put his shoes outside his hotel room door, in the thoroughly British expectation of their being cleaned while he slept—and each young fellow, in the morning, found upon his shoes all the dust of the day before. The youths' resultant disappointment moves the so-called metropolitan press to a sympathy closely approaching tears.

Commendable, however, as is this sympathy in general theory, it cannot be approved in practice by any American who has ever made the mistake of going to England for the first time. Every such American will remember the humiliation he suffered when he asked the way to a dry-goods store or a hardware store and was told that what he wanted was a draper's shop or an ironmonger's. He will recall the severe correction he received from the carpenter who was a joiner or a cabinetmaker. Hundreds of citizens of the United States will carry to their graves the wounds their feelings received when their reference to bugs on the plants in the conservatory brought forth, from haughty hostesses, the information that in England the word "bug" means a bedbug—and a bedbug only.

According, therefore, to all impulses of social retaliation, those British lads ought to be scolded for not knowing that we hustling Americans consider our personal presence indispensable at the "shining"—if not the "polishing"—of our shoes—if not our boots. Anybody who leaves his footwear in a hotel corridor in this country has no right to complain if that footwear is not cleaned. He should count himself fortunate if it isn't stolen.

On Campaign Pledges.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt is being roundly denounced for disregarding his campaign pledges and platform promises. The American people are not in the habit of considering disregard of such commitments in the face of current necessity as a serious reflection upon the honor or integrity of a President.

The charge of violated pledges urged against President Roosevelt are no whit different from those brought against other dynamic Administrations in our history.

The platform upon which Abraham Lincoln was elected specifically pledged the candidate not to interfere with the institution of slavery when it then existed under warrant of the Constitution. And yet under military necessity Lincoln issued the Emancipation Proclamation abolishing slavery in all States then in rebellion.

If by any chance Gov. Landon should find himself in the White House, he cannot possibly escape the reproach of unfilled pledges with which he now so bitterly upbraids his opponent. His futile and impossible pledge to extract billions of dollars from the hides of politicians with which to balance the budget is perhaps as absurd as any ever made by a Presidential candidate. The Republican platform, ironically enough written by Senator Borah, commits the candidate to destruction of monopoly, root and branch.

I wonder if any honest Republican can conscientiously assert that the party of vested rights and economic royalists has any serious intention of fulfilling this pledge if intrusted with power. KELLY MILLER.

Hissing And Religion.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. A. W. Burke states that hissing is not a monopoly controlled by communists, but ventures the advise and information that hissing is emotionalism and is caused by the cultivation of religious, economic and political environments.

Although hissing in itself indicates depraved breeding and displays the vulgar and unrefined sense of an individual's character and personality and should be criticised and condemned; it is not nearly as important as Mr. Burke's misstatement that hissing is emotionalism and is caused by the cultivation of religious training and environment.

An overwhelming preponderence of evidence shows that religious people and those with great faith and understanding have more balance and sounder minds, superior judgment, intelligence, reason and all around complete balanced mentalities than those who ignore religious training, education and moral culture. It is probably true that sometimes religiously inclined people are over balanced and even insane but it was not religion that drove them into such a state of mind. OBSERVER.

High Dashboards.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Last Sunday a sedan drove into an excavation at F street. On account of the high dash and radiator of the automobile the driver could not see 40 feet in front of his right front wheel.

I submit these points for consideration:

1. The average driver of most of the late model automobiles cannot see the roadway 30 feet in front of the right front wheel.

2. Many short drivers cannot see the roadway 200 to 300 feet in front of their automobiles, and some cannot see the level road at all, but drive by that portion of the other automobiles and pedestrians that protrudes above the instrument board. Blind driving.

The failure to see the right side of the road is directly responsible for the "curbshy" drivers who hug the center of the road and force those attempting to pass to cross the center line, and therefore the high dash and radiator are responsible for many head-on collisions.

The Enemy Of Peace.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since the very beginning of civilization, finance or ownership has ruled and ordered the destiny of the masses and today it is the same. Governments and political officials are nothing but stooges. Constitutional governments with free education challenge their rule and Fascism is the last device to maintain undisputed power. Fascism is nothing more than organized faudalism and through wars, revolutions, strikes and strifes, has proven its self to have no humanity or mercy, when fighting to keep the people in subjugation.

Until the masses understand and believe the Master when he said: "Verily, verily, I say unto you where the purse is, there is the heart also;" until then, we shall cry, Peace! Peace! but there will be no peace for the end is not yet come.

Courtesy On The Streets.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I noted "Mars'" letter in The Post and I do believe that we need a program of education here. By that I mean we all need a lesson on courtesy. The motorist is bad, but the pedestrian respects neither a car nor another walker.

"Mars'" attitude is typical of the majority of pedestrians. Mention the word automobile in their presence and the hair on their neck will rise up. They always think of a car as a death-dealing monster, never remembering that the auto brought us out of the last depression. I wonder how "Mars" would like to pay $2 or $3 a month for the privilege of walking on the sidewalk, and if he started on the red light, bingo: traffic court. That is what motorist does, as most cars average from 50 to 100 gallons of gas per month.

I hope "Mars" reads Director Van Duzer's report to the Commissioners on jaywalking. R. M. KING.

Amendment Proposal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of September 7 poses a fair problem in stating that, "We need more positive and informed consideration of the best means of securing a maximum output under conditions that will give every employable man a chance to work and to share adequately in the return from his labor."

The Post's readers may find food for thought and further discussion in this suggestion: Amending the Constitution so as to vest in Congress the power to legislate regarding maximum hours and minimum wages for all persons gainfully employed, excepting the liberal professions and State and municipal civil servants.

The following objects could be attained thereby:

1. Reduction of the working week from 44 to 40 hours for industrial labor and from 39 to 35 hours for "white collar" workers.

2. No married woman living with her spouse would work for a wage in the ranks of the former or a salary in the latter classification, unless the husband is temporarily unemployed through no fault of his own or permanently disabled by accident.

3. No minor under the age of 18 years would be given working papers. Severe penalties could be levied against employers for violation of this article.

If such a course, as your editorial points out, means a lowering of the standard of living for those now employed, but a better lot for the families of the men presently to be ployed, the sacrifice made in providing needed jobs would go a long way toward cutting down the relief rolls. PRO BONO PUBLICO.
Washington, Sept. 7.

The Power Conference.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The World Power Conference now assembled in Washington reminds one of the writing of millenniums ago in the Book of Books. In the sixty-second of the selections called Psalms we read, "Once have I heard, twice have I heard, power belongeth unto God."

This same great Book of the Hebrews records of their progenitor, Abraham, that he was a friend of God and walked with God. One of their later prophets wrote, "What doeth the Lord require of thee but to do justice, love mercy, and walk humbly?"

We find in another section of the same wonderful record of mankind's experiences and inspirations, "The powers that be are ordained by God." And a later great prophet when challenged said, "Render unto Caesar things that are Caesar's."

In our Government "of the people, and by the people, and for the people" the "people" are "Caesar."

The times with which we have to deal would seem to make careful study of the above writings as of vital importance to the permanent wealth of our people.

Margaret Mitchell's Picture Of Grant

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Like many others I am reading "Gone With the Wind" but was made not only indignant but disappointed to find Margaret Mitchell had joined the group of Southern women writers who can not resist trying to defame the reputation of Gen. Grant. On Page 279 when she states: "Gen. Grant was a butcher who did not care how many men he slaughtered."

No true soldier ever "slaughtered" men of his own command or even those of his enemy. "War is hell," as Gen. Sherman said, and the exigencies of war often demand attacks which bring heavy losses, but a commander always hopes they may be minimized and extends all the protection possible to his men. If not why breastworks, dug-outs, gas masks, etc.? This attitude of these detractors seems to savor of class hatred, narrow minds and an effort to keep alive prejudices of over a half a century ago. Since then the sons and grandsons of the North and South have fought side by side in the Spanish War and the World War, many of whom today sleep side by side in the fields of France and in our own cemeteries.

Many women of the United States are constantly making efforts for peace and to outlaw war—such statements do not seem to be in keeping with these efforts. The Civil War was fought to save the Union and preserve us as a united nation. So let us be an example to other nations and bury our bitterness at least toward those who are in their graves and a grateful nation has erected statues to.

My father was one of Gen. Grant's commanders, winning victories in Vicksburg and Atlanta, receiving the thanks and medals for such by Congress. He was devoted to his commander-in-chief in the war and later in civil life which brought the two families in close intimacy.

I attended school with Nellie, Buck, Jessie and Jack Dent when Gen. Grant was in the White House and often played there with the boys enabling me to see and enjoy Gen. Grant's tenderness and kindliness—his true nature.

As a member of many of the patriotic societies, I have dear friends in Atlanta and throughout the South. We work together in harmony, often affection, to perpetuate the memory of our ancestor heroes of the various wars, to protect and preserve our American ideals and the Constitution. I would suggest to these detractors they join in these efforts and against the enemy today within our gates. MARY LOGAN TUCKER.

Protestant Monastery

Post Office, Friday.

It isn't safe to guess at how many Washingtonians know that, within easy motoring distance of the Capital, there is a monastery which was built 101 years ago, by Protestants.

It is safe to assert, however, that those Washingtonians who have visited Ephrata, Pa., will hear with regret the news of how the coming winter may make an end of Ephrata Kloster.

So far as this columnist knows, it is the only relic of its kind remaining in America. And it drew something of its inspiration from the District's next door neighbor, Maryland.

Konrad Beissel was born in Baden in 1690, apprenticed to a baker, became an enthusiastic adherent of the pietistic movement then secretly sweeping Germany and, at Schwarzenau, Westphalia, joined Alexander Mack's Dunkers—whose precepts include simplicity of dress, non-resistance, pacificism, non-participation in affairs of law and government. Beissel came to America in 1720, but soon decided that his brother Dunkers in Germantown, near Philadelphia, were "living in too worldly surroundings."

Pennsylvania had many hermits. There'd been the Astronomer Kelpius on the banks of the Wissahickon, and Elimelech, near what is now the town of Bird-in-Hand. Beissel would be a hermit, too. He sought the hut that once was Elimelech's solitary cell.

But he ventured thence, to preach, into more settled districts. Once he went as far as Bohemia Manor in Cecil County, Md., where was a Labadist colony, founded in 1684 and ruled by the dictatorial Peter Schluter or Sluyter. Although it never achieved such importance as that to which its successor was to rise, it stirred Beissel to ardent emulation.

When there was a quarrel among the Dunkers of Lancaster County, he and a few adherents withdrew to the wilderness that was to flower into Ephrata. There was repeated the history of monasticism as it originally grew in the Near East: admirers followed the Beisselites; a settlement of hermits sprang up along the Cocalico, and this settlement was eventually united into a single community.

The "Sister House," called "Saron," is typical: a wooden structure, shingled even upon the sides, three-storied with as many windows as an ocean liner has portholes, the mud-and-straw plaster secured by oaken laths. Nails were forbidden wherever it was possible to do without them; even the candlesticks, knives, forks, plates and goblets were wooden.

There were no written "rules," or body of laws, but there was discipline aplenty. Every one of the 150 monks and as many nuns had to do manual labor—lumbering, farming, weaving, the manufacture of pottery. All money went into a common purse. The cells were cells indeed, the food was of the very simplest sort and of the very scantiest measure.

America's first Sunday school was started there, and a seminary having secular courses which drew students from Philadelphia and Baltimore. Ephrata's musical compositions and their performance attracted a royal commission from London and, subsequently, a royal gift from George II—a great brass-bound box, the contents whereof are still a mystery.

Beissel promptly buried the donation, just as he had refused the colonial Governor's offer of 5,000 additional acres of land:

"Lest the mark of kingly favor should foster pride" and "because it would be injurious to spiritual life to acquire much property."

Franklin printed Ephrata's first book, but the community soon had its own press. It assisted in the production of the famous "Saur Bible" and later turned out the "Martyrer Spiegel," 1,514 pages on the Mennonite martyrs, three years' work for 15 monks: four compositors, four pressmen, most of the rest working in paper mill and bindery.

The original price was 20 shillings. But, during the Revolution, the colonial soldiers—despite or because of the fact that the Ephrata press was printing the colonial money—confiscated the "remainders" for rifle-wadding.

If, in 1936, you can pick up a copy for $20, you'd better hurry and pick it.

The community itself did not long survive. And now its remaining buildings are threatened.

You may still visit "Saron," still see its meeting room on the ground floor and the "Totenkammer," where the dead lay in state before burial. By the aid of a rope, you may still climb the incredibly steep stairs and—stooping to learn humility—enter any of 60 cells, their beds made of two planks each, a wooden block for pillow.

You may do that today. But "Saron" won't be there next spring—unless plans for its restoration are somehow realized.

—Reginald Wright Kauffman.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

The Underclassmen.

One point made by old Jim Watson in his story of a stranded porpoise deserves fair consideration, even though it does come from a man who sees nothing wrong in the selection of Presidents by private decision of the likes of Boies Penrose and himself.

Old Jim's book, "As I Knew Them," complains that many hard-working Senators and Representatives receive no credit for years of studious toil which do not appear in any public record and observes that in almost any given membership of the lower House there are a lot of freshmen so inexperienced and so little acquainted with the town as to be useless or worse. He might have added to these freshmen a proportion of sophomores, or second-term Representatives, because Washington is a complex Capital, and there are some statesmen who do not learn their way around even in four years.

The freshmen, however, are almost a dead loss, so bewildered in the maze of buildings, bills, bureaus and procedure that they find themselves up for re-election and, in many cases, licked, gone and forgotten before they have a chance to record their presence by any service, useful or otherwise.

• • • • •

If it takes eight or ten years for a newspaper reporter to become thoroughly seasoned on the Washington run, to acquire the background and extend his range of acquaintance, it is hardly wise to expect that new Congressman to hop into new surroundings and a new job and make himself useful to the full extent of his natural ability, if any, from the moment he slings his satchel into his room at the hotel.

The new Congressman arriving in Washington for the first time learns a sharp lesson in humility. He is a celebrity and a person of consequence on his own home grounds, but in the Capital he is only one Congressman among 435, and a freshman at that. They come and they go in Washington, and the social prestige of the position is almost negligible at best—a fact which affects the soul of the membership most unhappily.

Senators are invited around to the fashionable salons, which are in many cases mere dog pits in which famous enemies are nosed up face to face in the hope that they will go for one another, but the Representative is elaborately ignored unless he happens to be a particular somebody in his own right.

The public buildings are vast and the Government departments so many that a man can't possibly memorize their initials, much less understand the services which they purport to perform. By the time he has memorized a few and remembered the names of their chief clerks some of them have been split up at the ratio of four to one and he finds himself thrown for a long loss in his effort to learn what it is all about.

• • • • •

Then, too, even in the House membership the attitude toward the greenhorns is similar to that of the upper classmen toward the freshmen in college. The old-timers know that the new men are confused, and treat them with condescension, have secrets from them, kid them and won't let them sound off with patriotic oration—a bitter disappointment.

The police formerly showed Congressmen some deference, but the escapades of Herrick, Shoemaker and Zioncheck have cost the House some dignity, and the cops nowadays are governed by the rule that a Congressman is as good as a citizen only if he bheaves himself.

But, as Old Jim points out, legislation affecting such matters as banking and finance and the tariff is not to be understood from partisan speeches by the leaders on the floor nor from the scanning of headlines in partisan newspapers. These problems take solemn study and a grade of intelligence which is not to be found in such wholesale lots as make up the body of the House of Representatives.

• • • • •

Another phase of the problem which somehow doesn't occur to Old Jim is that when legislation affecting great interests one way or another is defaulted by the nonentities into the hands of earnest, devoted party leaders who know the ropes and know how to get schedules whipped into shape, there is always a danger that these splendid old characters will slip over something which ought not to be.

I didn't discover this disturbing thought in Old Jim's memoirs, but, then, you couldn't expect him to think of everything—least of all, that.

Landon and Kansas

British Observer Finds Republican Candidate No More Typical Than His State; Election Would Mean G. O. P. Revolution.

By D. W. Brogan.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Mr. Brogan, professor of political science at Oxford University, is touring the United States as a correspondent of the London Times.

Kansas City.

FROM "a typical prairie State." So a widely distributed Republican poster describes Mr. Landon. It is the purpose of such posters to persuade the American voter that Mr. Landon not only comes from a "typical" prairie State, but that he is a "typical" sound American. Realizing that they have to "sell" the candidate to millions of voters who know nothing about him; realizing, too, that Mr. Landon cannot hope to compete in personal appeal with Mr. Roosevelt, the "building-up" of the Republican candidate is directed to reassuring the voter alarmed by the boldness of Mr. Roosevelt. Mr. Landon is safe. Whether this policy is wise, time will show. But it is unjust to Mr. Landon, even if it is helpful, for Mr. Landon is not "typical."

He is not typical in appearance. His photographs do not, as a rule, do him justice. He has no readily marked feature like the President's jutting chin, and the cartoonists have been hard put to it to make a symbol of him. As the Punch cartoonists marked Palmerston by putting a straw in his mouth, the artists and the photographers have tended to concentrate on the fact that Mr. Landon wears octagonal-rimmed glasses.

It is true that Mr. Landon's appearance would not mark him as exotic in any American gathering, in a Rotary Club or a university meeting or in a baseball crowd. But in repose, the Republican candidate's features suggest much more a French abbe than any typical American face. The firm chin and mouth suggest that this abbe would not be stranded in a country parish; he would be a vicar general or a bishop; but the impression made in private conversation is that of a sagacious, self-controlled and energetic abbe, not an American go-getter, not an American figurehead. It is a suggestion of power, but not of too obvious and noisy power. The voice, which tends to be shrill in public speaking, is clear and pleasant in conversation. The manner is that of a man with self-confidence enough, but ready to learn and with a high sense of his responsibilities.

Mr. Landon is a representative man, but not a "typical American." If he were, he would not be Republican candidate for President, for he would not be Governor of Kansas. For Kansas is not a typical prairie or any other kind of State.

'Kansas Coolidge' Title Criticized As Inadequate.

WHEN the star of Alf M. Landon first rose above the American political horizon last year, his Eastern supporters attempted to "sell" the idea of his candidacy by calling him the "Kansas Coolidge." The phrase had its points. It evoked the memories of the golden days of prosperity, of Republican rule, of an administration headed by a man who said and believed that "the business of the United States is business." But in their nostalgic description of Mr. Landon lurked the germs of an error that may disappoint the Republican candidate's friends and surprise his enemies.

A "Kansas Coolidge"—the description may be just, but even if it is, the adjective in the phrase is so important that it reduces almost to the vanishing point, the importance of the noun. To call Oxford the English Detroit is accurate, as far as it goes, but it does not tell us much more than does calling Irkutsk the "Paris of Siberia."

There may be American States with little individuality, commonwealths cut out of the public domain by Congress and held together by merely legal bonds, but Kansas is not one of them. Kansas has very decidedly its own character, its own ethos and no one can be elected Governor of Kansas once, much less twice, without sharing that ethos. Gov. Landon does and it is part of his strength and weakness.

To the practical politician, the weakness is more apparent, at first sight, than the strength. Kansas, as candid but loyal sons would willingly admit, has a reputation for eccentricity. It has the same power of evoking laughter on the stage that in England attaches to the name of Wigan. The song, "Way Out West in Kansas," with its catalogue of absurdities, represents the average American's idea of the State.

Forty years ago one of its most famous sons, William Allen White, asked "What's the matter with Kansas?" and answered his own question by listing and damning its current political extravagances. Kansas then was a rural Clydeside. It was in Kansas that the most vehement agrarian demagogues had their origin or found their most vehement supporters. There was that fearless tribune of the people, "Sockless Jerry" Simpson; there was the Kansas "Pythoness," Mrs. Leese, who advised the farmers to "raise less corn and more hell."

In the past 40 years Kansas has quieted down a good deal; it has lost much of its frontier color. No longer is Abilene a great center of the cattle trade, with cowboys, gamblers, bad men, sheriffs, all combining to put on a show in the best Hollywood manner. Nevertheless, Kansas is still Kansas. It is immune to outside criticism and goes its own way; all the United States may be out of step, but Kansas will tread the straight and narrow path.

High Puritanism Found Running In Kansas.

NO STATE west of the Mississippi is so marked by American rural Puritanism. It was an early pioneer of prohibition. It long banned the deadly cigarette. Its population is, to a very high degree, "Anglo-Saxon," not mixed with Germans or Scandinavians prone to Laodicean views on questions of public morals—and in Kansas all morals are public. Not merely was Kansas a prohibition pioneer. She still is. The people of Kansas have recently voted to retain prohibition by a decisive majority, thereby testifying to their independence—and putting their local politicians in a tight corner.

The State constitution forbids all sale of intoxicating beverages but does not define "intoxicating." Until that it is done, it is possible to sell in Kansas fluids that are normally regarded as intoxicating. If there is a prosecution, there is the chance of persuading a jury that no one was in fact intoxicated. But it is not to be forgotten that Kansas is the home of Carry A. Nation, the crusader who chopped up illegal saloons with her little hatchet. There is always a danger that some new Mrs. Nation may appear. The governor has refused to allow his name to appear as a patron of the Anti-Saloon League at the cost of support in his own State. But should a new Mrs. Nation arise before November the Democrats would (whatever their views on the merits of the question) welcome such an ally.

As a national candidate, Gov. Landon had and has two great claims on the public mind. He managed to be elected as a Republican in 1932, when the fortunes of the party were at their lowest ebb. He managed to be re-elected in 1934, when the ebb had turned hardly at all, if at all. As Governor he balanced the State budget when the Nation was going "into the red" with great speed.

President Roosevelt believed in spending for recovery; Mr. Landon in saving. His critics assert, of course, that he only balanced the State budget by the aid of Federal subsidies; that if Mr. Roosevelt had been economical, Mr. Landon would have found his frugal financial policy impossible. A plausible case can be made for that point of view, but in a campaign in which the state of the national finances is the main issue, that matters little. In 1932 Mr. Roosevelt promised to balance the budget, heavily in deficit under Mr. Hoover; he did not do it. Mr. Landon made the same promises and carried them out. On how seriously the voters take this contrast the fate of the election will depend.

It should be noted, however, that one aspect of Kansas budget-balancing makes Mr. Landon vulnerable in his own State and out of it. Europeans, accustomed to American peans in praise of the little red schoolhouse of the educational ladder open to the top, find it hard to realize the disastrous effects of the depression on the American educational system. In many States most of the rungs were removed from the educational ladder by the simple process of shutting up the schools. In districts which escaped this disaster all school expenditure was cut to a minimum by the drastic reduction of teachers' salaries and, in some places, by the more drastic expedient of not paying them at all.

School teachers are a numerous body and allied with fathers and mothers in parent-teacher associations, they are politically formidable. In Kansas, the State educational system leaves control of schools to boards elected by school districts. These districts are small; their resources are often meager and many Kansas school teachers would consider themselves lucky if they could rely on an income of £100 a year. Gov. Landon had no power to remedy this situation, but it is natural that in other sections a state of affairs resulting from the highly individualistic local government institutions of Kansas should be put to the debit side of Mr. Landon's account.

No Westerner like Gov. Landon can, for a moment, accept the blind laissez-faire policy (with exceptions for the tariff) which appeals to Wall Street. It is not merely a matter of political appeal. Mr. Landon could not have been elected twice, or have the friends he has in Kansas, if he were not far more to the left than the Eastern Republicans can really like. If he is elected it will be in part due to this.

His election would mean a temporary, perhaps a permanent shift in Republican contral. It would be historically fitting that such a change should come from Kansas, for it was to save Kansas from slavery that the Republican Party was founded 82 years ago. Kansas never forgets this if the party does. Kansans think the time has come to return thanks by saving the party. Not all of the party is grateful.

225 Electoral Votes in East Forecast by Gov. Landon Aid

By Felix Bruner.

John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, told members of the National Press Club yesterday that Gov. Alf M. Landon will receive from 225 to 230 electoral votes in States east of the Mississippi River. Earlier in the day, at a press conference, Hamilton said the Kansas Governor will carry every State, with possibly one exception, east of the Mississippi River and north of the Ohio River. He declined to say which State he might be willing to concede.

The national chairman frankly admitted that there had been what he called a "seasonal slump" in Republican prospects during August, but he insisted that it had been confined to the East and that Landon's popularity is now growing in that section of the country.

Hamilton confirmed reports of difficulties within the ranks of the Republican command, but added that "things are going smoothly now." He told the Press Club a story of a log floating down a river.

Many Prima Donnas.

"There were 10,000 ants on the log," he said, "and everyone of them thought he was guiding it.

"There are more prima donnas in a national political headquarters than ever trod the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House," he added.

The chairman in his talk also took cognizance of the opinion of critics who have said he has been making too many speeches.

"Something had to be done," he said, "because of the spirit of defeatism in the party. We thought—and I say we advisedly—that I should make the Western trip."

At the outset, he said, the situation west of the Mississippi "looked tough," but he declared the prospects there are much brighter. He said that regardless of stories to the contrary Landon would carry Kansas by a big majority. He said the Kansan would carry Wyoming and that the situation in the Dakotas, Nebraska, Iowa and Minnesota was increasingly bright. He said most of the Mountain States, except Colorado, had at first appeared "tough" but that the prospects there were improving rapidly.

Hamilton at his press conference said Landon's future itineraries had not been completed, but he added he did not beleive they would include a trip to the coast. He expressed the opinion that Pennsylvania was "safe" and that the Republican had a "bit of an edge" in Michigan. He said Landon would have a sufficient majority in upState New York to carry the State in spite of the New York City vote.

$1,783,000 Disbursed.

Meanwhile, the Republican National Committee reported to the clerk of the House that from June 10 to August 31 the party's disbursements had amounted to $1,783,000 and that during the same period receipts had totaled $2,050,311. Previous reports showed that during January and February disbursements amounted to $165,559 and that in March, April and May they were $571,549, making a grand total of $2,544,919. The party revealed that it had in its campaign war chest on August 31 the sum of $495,349.

Contributions of $100 or more, the report showed, amounted to $1,766,343, and of less than $100 totaled $284,311.

Pitcairn, of Philadelphia, and Theodore Pitcairn, of Bvrn Athyn, Pa., each contributed $11,350. The Massachusetts Republican finance committee added $65,000 and the Pennsylvania committee $25,000.

Col. W. P. Draper, of Boston, and H. H. Timken, of Canton, Ohio, each gave $10,000. Four members of the du Pont family, Lammot, William, jr., Felix and Irenee, each contributed $5,000. Bernarr McFadden, publisher, also gave $5,000.

No report has yet been received from the Democratic National Committee nor from the Union, Socialist or Communist parties.

Other reports included:

Mussolini Today

Italian Adopts Napoleonic "M" As Designation, To Which His Followers, Mindful Of Proudhon's Advice, Readily Assent.

The following, by Dr. F. A. Kramer, appeared originally in the Berliner Tageblatt. It is here reprinted from a translation published by the Living Age.

BY THE grace of God and the will of the nation, the King of Italy has become the wearer of an emperor's crown. Marshal Badoglio has received the title and rank of a duke, and Gen. Graziani has become marshal and viceroy. The war ministry's list of promotions and decorations shows swollen columns of names. All those who helped in the victory will share the honor and glory in the order of their merit; and others are making an all the more determined effort to have a little splendor fall upon them. Touched by the breath of the muses, D'Annunzio and Marinetti strum their lyres. But what has become of the prime mover of this war, of its driving force?

Mussolini has become "M." He has not added anything to his name—he has substracted something from it. The billboards on the walls of Rome which carry his last proclamations now bear merely this one forceful, unmistakable letter. It is a passing sign, but one which throws an unusually illuminating light upon an important historical change. After the Order of the Annunciata, which as long as a decade ago made him a "cousin of the King," and again after the Great Cross of the House of Savoy, token of his military deeds, there was no further decoration that would make a suitable reward for him. The claim to be a unique historical figure, the decisive factor of a national epoch, can find further expression only in a name.

Who is not reminded by this "M" of the significance of that other letter which is to be seen on the later wings of the Louvre? An "N" within a laurel wreath—the sign of an epoch of French history which was likewise called an Empire! When was it, after what events, that Napoleon reduced his signature to this initial?

It is a mighty claim, an almost Promethean egotism which finds expression thus! But in the stormy years of his period of struggle Mussolini often openly professed this driving force: "Yes, I am obsessed by this mad ambition. It flames up in me; it corrodes and consumes me like a physical disease. Deliberately to carve my mark on the age, like the lion with his paws . . ." A decade of unlimited power does not seem to have quenched this ambition, though it seems to have given it increasing direction, content and aim. It must have taught him the meaning of what Aristotle called "the bitter burden of ruling."

Changes Detected In Duce's Personality.

MANY A CHANGE may be observed in his person. Last winter Mussolini's hair turned white, and his language became more benevolent. He strongly emphasizes the distinction between the private and the public sphere, despite the fact that the excessive zeal of those around him makes it particularly difficult to realize this distinction today. We observed a significant episode two weeks ago, when, after the founding of the city of Aprilia, he and his retinue partook of a brief meal. Mussolini had tucked his napkin into the lapel of his coat and was eating his spaghetti heartily, when in the course of the conversation one of the foreign guests felt it necessary to inquire after the health of his sons in Africa. "They're well, they're flying . . ." he growled in a tone which cut the subject short.

After all, it is not entirely unknown that with Mussolini, as with every true Italian, the family represents an out-and-out weak point. It can be asserted with certainty that the two sons' silver medals "al valore militare" made the father prouder than many army victories. In the way in which he dismissed the guest's inquiry he demonstrated how strongly he still wishes to maintain a distinction between his private and his public life.

Of greater political significance is the limitation he has imposed upon himself as regards the dynasty. Like Bismarck, he has stopped at the foot of the throne in order to direct splendor and titles upon it. The proclamation of the Empire concludes a development which is of the utmost significance for Italy's future. The Fascist revolution has now definitely taken possession of the green, white and red tricolor, with its Savoy cross, in order to carry it on. In undisputed possession of the government authority after having carried through the planned shifts in power, it has selected what it wishes to continue as the heritage of the past. It has eradicated the conflict between the patriotism which originated in the Risorgimento and carried the name of the king on its lips and that other patriotism which stormed forward in the black shirt. The transformation of the revolution into the state has entered its last stage. The gap between the two periods is closing.

Patriarchal Dynasty Kept Step With Fascism.

MUSSOLINI has placed himself beside Cavour and Garibaldi. He could do so because, during the unrest of the post-war period, the House of Savoy, whose name had taken on a revolutionary ring in the nineteenth century struggle for unity, chose anew the cause of the revolution, with which it kept faith despite the heavy burdens of the past winter. Surprisingly, this old, patriarchial dynasty has known how to keep in step with the movement of the people. In this way fascism has succeeded in carrying through the transformation of the state without having to destroy the royal escutcheon. Apparently the situation is now regarded as so well balanced that its condition in a constitution no longer seems far distant.

The Duce del Fascimo and Capo del Governo will remain the center of the constitutional structure, retaining his responsibility to the Re-Imperatore. With this designation, the fundamental importance of which has not been understood everywhere, Mussolini has reached back into the history of the Latin Roman Empire. With it he lays claim to the power of government by resorting to personal qualities which designate him above all others to lead state affairs. Claudian, the poet of the declining empire, describes this capacity with the verses: "In his wisdom, carefully weighing, he foresees what others grasp but later, and lays down what will be useful to the world."

The Italian people's confidence in his leadership is unlimited today. It lives in the confident hope of being able at some future date to look back on history and to say that Mussolini fulfilled the words spoken by Proudhon in the sixties: "All that is needed is that a man shall be born of this earth, a Richelieu, a Colbert, a Conde—and in less than a generation Italy will take its place among the empires and exercise a mighty influence throughout Europe."

In this expectation Italy is only too willing to wind the laurel wreath around the "M" . . .

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Grid Star, 1936

(Twenty-four colleges sell football broadcasting rights to commercial sponsors."—News item.)

He couldn't run, he couldn't kick;
No trick play did he ever spike,
But he went on to football fame—
For he was good upon the "mike!"

He didn't have the will to win;
He couldn't take it very much,
But he became a great grid star—
He had that certain air wave touch.

His lack of speed was most complete;
His passing game was only fair,
But he'd a certain something when
They said, "This game is on the air!"

The fumble was his stock in trade;
A chance to score he'd always blow,
But he eclipsed both Coy and Grange
Because he knew his radio.

His teammates called him "Little runt;"
Aggressively the boy was weak,
But Saturdays upon the air
He had that radio technique.

His game was something worse than vile;
His punting was the worst of jokes,
But he had something on the ball
The minute he' heard, "Listen, folks . . ."

He wasn't worth his salt to Yale,
His alma mater thought him crude
But ,boy, the things that he could do
To help promote a breakfast food!

To frenzied cries of "Team! Team! Team!"
He'd indolently sit and jeer,
And mutter, "Aw, the hell with that!
Just tell me, is my sponsor here?"

His college never thought him much
Upon the field each afternoon;
He cost his team a dozen games—
But golly how that guy could croon!

He'll graduate this coming year,
A flop and bust the college says;
But he'll get 50 grand a year
Extolling some one's mayonnaise.

Rear Admiral Alfred S. Reynolds, 83, United States Navy, retired, died at the Naval Hospital here Wednesday, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

Funeral services will be held in Arlington Cemetery today at 3 p. m., with full military honors. Lieut. Comdr. Joseph H. Brooks, Navy chaplain, will officiate.

Rear Admiral Reynolds was born in Hampton, Va., September 7, 1853. He was appointed to the Naval Academy from the Seventh District of Indiana.

In 1888 he served on the U. S. S. Swatara. He was in command of the U. S. S. Massasoit during the Spanish-American War, and in 1900 he was placed in command of the U. S. S. Yosemite.

He served as ordnance officer at the Philadelphia Navy Yard from 1902 to 1905, when he was given command of the U. S. S. Franklin. In 1906 he commanded the U. S. S. Montana, and upon detachment from that duty, he served as governor of the Naval Home, Philadelphia, until May, 1912, when he was appointed commander in chief of the Pacific Reserve Fleet.

In August, 1912, he accompanied the Secretary of State to the Far East to attend the funeral ceremonies of the Emperor of Japan. In 1913 he was appointed a member of the Naval Examining Board here, and later he served as president of the board.

He retired on September 7, 1915, upon reaching the retirement age, but he was recalled to active duty during the World War. He was in command of the Naval Reservation at Gulfport, Miss., from July 20, 1917, until December 11, 1919, when he was released from active duty.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Sarah Josephine Reynolds, of 2220 N street northwest.

Richman Again Fails To Decide to Take Off

Liverpool, England, Sept. 10 (AP).—Harry Richman, the Broadway crooner, who for days has been decided and undecided on his prospective flight to New York with Pilot Dick Merrill, tonight decided on and then decided against a dawn take-off.

Before going to the theater Richman announced they would take off at dawn. Receiving a British air ministry weather report in the theater Richman said he guessed they wouldn't take off.

"It seems a shame to waste all that good weather," the crooner sighed, "but I guess we'd better wait after all."

Troops in Area Are Organized Into New Unit

Gen. Roberts to Command Provisional Brigade; 16th to Be Moved.

Regular Army troops stationed in Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia have been assigned to a new organization known as the Washington Provisional Brigade, under the command of Brig. Gen. Charles D. Roberts, the War Department announced yesterday. Gen. Roberts heretofore has been in command of the Sixteenth Brigade.

Brig. Gen. Lorenzo D. Gasser, at present chief of staff of the Fourth Corps Area, Atlanta, Ga., will succeed Gen. Roberts in command of the Sixteenth, and the headquarters of the brigade will be moved from Washington to Fort George G. Meade, Md., it was announced.

The new Washington Provisional Brigade will consist of approximately 2,500 troops made up of the following units:

Twelfth Infantry, Fort Howard and Fort Washington, Md., to be detached from the Sixteenth Brigade.

Third Calvary, less one squadron, Fort Myer, Va., to be detached from the Sixth Cavalry Brigade.

Machine Gun Troop, Tenth Cavalry, Fort Myer, Va., to be detached from the Fifth Cavalry Brigade.

First Battalion, Sixteenth Artillery, Fort Myer, Va. to be detached from the Eighth Field Artillery Brigade.

The War Department said "no physical changes of station of troops are involved in this change of organization. The principal effects of the reorganization will be to place in a composite brigade a number of Regular Army organizations in close proximity to Washington and also to make Fort George G. Meade a brigade headquarters post under the command of a general officer.

It's our family's whiskey, neighbor—and neighbor, it's your price!

This is me just stopping by Wally Potter's place to say hello to Wally

That's me up there on Maude's back, and Wally laying in the hammock, and our dog Jessie fixing to hop up onto Wally's lap. So far as I know, Wally Potter never took part in the making of any whiskey, but being raised right here with the distillery so close by, naturally he's always had the chance to learn more about how a good whiskey ought to taste than anybody I know. Wally says ever since the Wilken Family started distilling—and that's some 50 years ago—he's never yet come across anything having such a real tastiness to it as The Wilken Family's own personal recipe.

I mean the way it's got of trickling down so cool and pleasant like

Maybe it's the special mildness our Family's Whiskey has got to it that makes it feel so extra lovely on your throat when it's all dry and you're wanting real bad to cool it off. Or like as not it's just so plain good tasting it makes it seem better to you on account of your enjoying it so.

I don't know—but anyhow I can tell from all your orders you're finding The Wilken Family Whiskey just about as much to your liking as Wally Potter up there in the picture I told you about.

Well, I got to say this much. It took our Family quite some time learning all the things that make this recipe like it is. Counting Grandad Wilken and Dad and William and Tom and me, that makes 50 years or so the Wilken Family has been concerning itself with whiskey making. So all in all I guess it's not so odd the way you're all asking for it wherever you find you can get it!

U. S.-Argentina Cattle Breeding Experiment Set

Ocean Plane Will Help in Project Sponsored by Two Nations.

By the United Press.

A thermos container, a kitchen ice box, an automobile, a transport plane and a high speed inter-continental airliner all will be utilized this week in the greatest long-distance experiment yet attempted in the field of artificial impregnation of cattle.

If the experiment which will begin tomorrow at the United States Agricultural Experiment Farm at Beltsville, Md., is successful, a thoroughbred Holstein bull on the experimental farm will become the sire of a calf by a thoroughbred shorthorn cow in Buenos Aires.

According to plans which have been developed in great detail here by Don Carlos Garcia Mata, commercial attache of the Argentine embassy, and Government scientists at the experimental farm, the material for the experiment will be collected tomorrow afternoon. It will be kept in the kitchen ice box in a thermos container at the home of Dr. Fred W. Miller, Government scientist, at a temperature of about 40 degrees Farenheit, until the last moment possible before rushing it to Washington Airport to be placed upon a plane leaving here for Miami, at 10:45 p. m. tomorow.

Fly Over Ocean.

At Miami the container will be transferred to one of the fast clipper planes equipped with a refrigerated box and will be flown to Buenos Aires by the South American East Coast route. It is due to arrive at the Argentine capital next Friday at 4:50 p. m., Buenos Aires time.

Ten thoroughbred Shorthorn cattle are being held in readiness for the completion of the experiment at the Argentine government's experimental station near Buenos Aires. Shorthorns have been selected so that the color of any calves that may result from the experiment will afford guarantee against any error of local breeding.

In case normal breeding conditions required for the completion of the experiment are absent among the ten cows selected when the container reaches Argentina, one of the largest ranchers near that capital has proffered selections which may be available at the moment from a herd of more than 1,000 cattle.

Ravage of Fever.

The experiment holds important possibilities for cattlemen in the tick fever country of northern Argentina. These ranchers have been handicapped for many years by failure of imported sires to withstand the ravages of the fever to which cattle develop an immunity in course of time.

The necessity for importing bulls for breeding purposes is obvious, but those imported have died in large numbers in a comparatively short time. Cattlemen see in the present experiment possibilities of restocking their ranges through mechanical fertilization from thoroughbred sires maintained by the Argentine government on experimental farms in tick-fever free areas, and improving the strains by importations shipped in thermos containers from abroad.

U. S. Cotton Cloth Imports Decrease

The Commerce Department reported yesterday imports for consumption of cotton cloth declined from 14,624,000 square yards in June to 4,705,000 in July, the first full month under new duties which became effective June 20.

The new tariff on certain classes of cotton cloth, followed months of protest by American manufacturers against competition from Japan. Japanese goods accounted for 1,959,000 square yards of July cotton cloth imports as compared with 12,038,000 in June. In July a year ago, Japan sent into this country 1,518,000 square yards of cotton cloth.

At the same time with duties lowered by the Canadian-American trade treaty, United States imports of foreign liquor increased sharply during the first seven months of this year.

In a Customs Bureau report, imports of distilled liquor for the period were set at 6,608,377 proof gallons compared with 3,190,751 gallons in the corresponding period last year.

Taxpayers Urge Projects in City, Oppose Taxes

estimates, apparently fell on deaf ears.

To Require Drastic Cut.

Donovan pointed out that this fiscal condition made it necessary to reduce the $58,000,000 estimates drastically. To finance such a budget as proposed by the department heads would require a real and personal property tax rate of $2.70 instead of $1.50 if no other source of revenue were found.

Consequently, should the Commissioners insist upon a balanced budget without new taxation, the auditor explained, all capital improvements requested by the department heads would have to be eliminated.

He also gave a revised estimate of the deficit expected at the end of the current year. From a previous calculation of $960,000 he raised it to $1,400,000.

Rufus Lusk, executive secretary of the Washington Taxpayers Association, was the principal witness at the first session of the hearing, which will be continued all day today.

Opposing any boost in the realty tax, Lusk demanded a cut in 1938 estimates "close to expected revenues," an end to the public assistance division of the welfare department and thus to direct unemployment relief, a "more vigorous campaign" to collect delinquent personal property taxes, and a study aimed at reorganization of the District government.

As an argument against additional taxes, he predicted revenues next year "will be appreciably larger than during the current year because of the building boom and the 25 per cent increase in population since 1930.

Urges Better Collections.

"This increase, and assuming that the Federal contribution remains at the inadequate figure of $5,000,000, should provide just about enough to operate a city the size of Washington," he said.

While admitting that real estate tax collections are probably the best in the country, Lusk charged that the tax collector's office is "little different from the receiving teller in a bank," so far as personal property levies are concerned.

"The average business man doing a credit business would starve to death if he used our present methods of collecting overdue personal taxes," he said.

Lusk opposed the proposed change to a three-platoon system for the fire department on account of the $1,038,000 cost, assailed the policemen's and firemen's pension fund and asserted it should be placed on an actuarial basis. He objected to proposed construction of five public health centers, two next year.

Arguing for a cessation to unemployment relief, Lusk took indirect issue with Elwood Street, public welfare director, who has suggested a $1,000,000 deficiency appropriation to care for 3,000 cases now denied both direct relief and WPA aid.

"Has anybody starved in the District of Columbia because he could not get relief?" he asked. "Let's have the name and address of one individual who has or is now starving because of the cutting down of relief rolls."

The demand for relief, he charged, comes from administrative employes who hold "good jobs paying up to $5,000 a year," and "practically every man in the street is opposed to it."

Cites School Costs.

Finally, he suggested the Commissioners call upon school officials to explain the jump in the cost-per-pupil of operating the schools from $27 to $60 a year with the 1938 proposed budget raising the figure to $181.

Paul E. Jamieson, attorney for the City Fire Fighters Association, made a plea for the three-platoon system with "standard hours" for Washington firemen and charged the city with operating a "sweatshop" by requiring them to work on 14 and 10 hour shifts.

He said an increase in taxes might be evaded by requiring fire underwriters to finance salvage squads, a service now furnished by the fire department, by elimination of certain extra men, and other economies.

Answering Lusk's attack on the pension fund, Jamieson said "the crying shame" was not the size of the fund, but the full pensions of $4,000 and $2,500 a year paid retired officers when many privates get as little as $30 a month and less than the maximum of 50 per cent of regular salaries.

He cited as "disgraceful" the action of the Commissioners a year ago in promoting Inspector Albert J. Headley to the rank of assistant superintendent so that he would get a $250 increase in pension before being retired shortly thereafter. Jamieson did not mention the famed "gentlemen's agreement" with Representative Thomas L. Blanton as the result of which the promotion was made.

Thomas Dent, of the Howard Park Citizens Association, asked for removal of abandoned street car tracks in his community, although the Commissioners explained his request had no connection with the budget.

English, on behalf of the Southeast Business Men's Association, besides asking for a new Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge, urged elimination of the bottleneck on Independence avenue on the south side of the Capitol, extension of Minnesota avenue from Benning road to Pennsylvania avenue southeast, abandonment or removal of the garbage transfer station at New Jersey avenue and Third street southeast and more policemen for the Fifth and Eleventh Precincts.

Louis F. Frick, secretary of the association, asked for seven or eight traffic lights, a supervisor to permit school playgrounds to remain open and consjruction of the proposed municipal stadium in the Southeast.

Edward O'Conner, battalion chief, as president of the District Firemen's Association, urged approval of the three-platoon system for the Fire Department, but made a slighting reference to the City Firefighters Association, represented by Jamieson.

When asked by Donovan whether the associations were identical, O'Conner replied:

"No, we are firemen."

J. French Simpson, president of the District Pharmaceutical Association, urged approval of health department estimates in general and the proposed health centers in particular.

The hearing ended on a sour note from Dr. Llewelyn Jordan, of the Board of Trade, who charged the Commissioners with "pussyfooting" with regard to negotiations with Maryland authorities in the proposed extension of New Hampshire and Eastern avenues.

on private property would raise close to $10,000,000 instead of $5,000,000, as appropriated at the last session of Congress.

He pointed out that the $850,000,000 in nontaxable Federal property in Washington represented more than half the taxable property, amounting to $1,131,799,384.

Department heads, it is understood, will be asked to attempt to break down their operating costs to show how much is attributable to the presence of the seat of the national Government.

This would indicate that Jacobs' approach to the problem might be from the angle of the actual cost of the Federal Government to the District.

However, as the advisory committee has not yet decided its policy, it is understood Jacobs merely is trying to get as much factual information as possible before deciding which basis to use for his calculation.

Hazen, in pointing out that he has advocated the assessment basis for the Federal contribution, said it would be difficult to determine exactly many of the costs of maintaining a National Capital that a comparative city would not have to bear.

"We wouldn't have built Constitution avenue on such a broad scale if it were not for the Federal buildings there," he said.

The advisory committee consists of George McAneny, president of the Title Guaranty & Trust Co., of New York; James W. Martin, chairman of the Kentucky State Tax Commission, and Clarence A. Dykstra, city manager of Cincinnati.

awake. For a time, they said, Donna's puppies added to the clamor.

Miss Iglesias explained that she gave the puppies away after complaints.

Mrs. Wienfeld said the thought of Donna gave her child nightmares. Every time the child went near the fence separating the two houses, she said, the dog ran out in a belligerent mood. The situation had reached the stage, she said, where they were afraid to pick the grapes on their side of the fence.

No Right to Grapes.

Miss Iglesias countered this by saying the grapes grew on her side of the fence and that the Wienfelds had no right to them.

Charles Love, who lives on the other side of Miss Iglesias' home, said the complaints against Donna were not justified. A policeman who patrols the neighborhood agreed with him and told how he had played with the dog.

During the session in Lauderdale's office, Charles C. Collins, attorney for Miss Iglesias, complained that Mrs. Wienfeld was making faces at Miss Iglesias. Lauderdale ordered Mrs. Wienfeld to take a seat farther away.

Lauderdale announced that a formal hearing would be held on the charges against Donna at 9:30 o'clock Thursday morning.

Miss Iglesias last night expressed the opinion that the whole controversy was "stupid."

Her name of America is symbolical, as are the names of her six sisters. They are Light, Equality, Liberty, Justice, Fraternity and Victory.

Betty and Jack Chafing at Ban On Altar Plans

Miss Grable Tries in Vain to Alter Contract So She Can Wed Coogan.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Sept. 10.—Blonde Betty Grable and Jackie Coogan are due to learn that love, although it may "laugh at locksmiths," can't even crack a smile at a lawyer.

The famous former kid actor would marry wide-eyed Grable tomorrow were it not for a clause in the girl's picture contract providing she mustn't say "I do" until she's 21, which she won't be until December 28, 1937.

They've been engaged on a when and if basis for almost a year, and Betty's left hand is all tired out carrying an oversized chunk of engagement ice, but at that it isn't half as tired as she is waiting for her twenty-first birthday.

This week impatient Grable launched a quiet campaign to speed things up, and went before the RKO-Radio legal department to try to get her contract revised omitting the "no under-age marriage" clause.

She used every trick in the bag except bursting into tears, but the law men stalled with a many a whereas and and/or.

They haven't told her yet, and she's still hoping, but her petition is a cinch to be denied. Even if the studio approved marriage for its baby stars—which it does not—the Coogan-Grable delayed marriage is too good a source of picture publicity to be pinched off.

Meanwhile Coogan has purchased a building lot in Beverly Hills and they have blue prints of their honeymoon home all drawn up—including plans for a nursery.

Recent renewed chumminess of Director William Wyler, with his former wife, Margaret Sullavan, is apparently no more than that. Wyler, who recently directed a picture aboard a synthetic R. M. S. Queen Mary, is planning to go abroad aboard the real ship to visit his native Mulhouse, in France. He'll be in Europe when Sullavan's divorce becomes final next February.

A more promising romance is that of David Niven and Merle Oberon. With Oberon due to go to England to make a picture for Alexander Korda, Niven has asked Samuel Goldwyn's permission to vacation Londonward, ostensibly to witness the coronation of Edward VIII. Niven, however, has tentatively invited Oberon to visit his home at Kuilrnuir, Scotland, which seems an ideal romantic background for the popping of that question.

Bombay, India, Sept. 10 (AP).—The Mahatma Gandhi today was reported greatly improved from an attack of malaria. But the Indian nationalist leader was warned of a relapse should he return to his home in a village infested with malarial mosquitoes.

About The Showshops

(With Gerald G. Gross, Batting for Nelson B. Bell)

SHAKESPEARE a la Thalberg, by all rational calculation, should be superior to the stage method. When Hollywood can give us a "Romeo and Juliet" whose character delineations are well nigh impeccable, whose fidelity to the bard's word is religious and whose technical mounting is all that could be desired, we should clap hands and promptly conclude that Shakespeare's place is on the screen and not behind footlights.

JULIET.

Right here, within a mashie-niblick shot of this L. C. Smith, is playing a picture which ought to make us feel satisfied, even eager, to witness our future Hamlets and Merchants of Venice and Lears in the picture houses henceforward, rather than in the theater. We sincerely think Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer or any other producer could not have improved upon the current "Romeo and Juliet," except possibly to select a man of fewer years than Leslie Howard for the Romeo part.

You may crow all you like about the Juliets of Jane Cowl and Mrs. Pat Campbell and Maude Adams, but you have to be downright perverse, if not mean, to argue that Norma Shearer is anything but a splendid Capulet who imparts every dram of exuberance, melancholy and affection that her role contains.

You may hark back sadly to the Romeos of Rollo Peters or Forbes-Robertson, but that of Leslie Howard needs no apology. If he seems too mature for the Montague blade, his sincere reading and deep understanding of the character's obligations seem to us to outweigh the physical handicap.

In every respect the Shearer-Howard-Thalberg version of "Romeo and Juliet" shapes up as one of the finest things—fish, fowl or film—ever imported from California. Yet we wonder if the picture in question does not suffer in comparison with the better of its stage predecessors.

Our doubts may be summed up in one word—flesh. Somehow, a Romeo with surface but no thickness speaking his poetry to a similarly flat Juliet fails to stir—in this one breast at least—the response so easily won when there are breathing, sweating, fallible people in the roles. Why, tears streamed down our cheeks when we saw Miss Cowl plunge a dagger into her heart and fall over the corpse of Mr. Peters a dozen or more years. Perhaps the last decade has toughened us up, but we gazed upon the tragic finale at the National Wednesday night with no show of emotion, inward or outward. Afterward we wondered, could the reason be the different medium or acquired callousness?

"All best wishes for the 101st season of the National Theater. We would consider it a privilege if we could present Maxwell Anderson's new play, 'The Wingless Victory,' there on the night of December 7 and thus assist at the celebration of a deathless theater."

Signed by Katharine Cornell and Guthrie McClintic, this telegram was received yesterday by Manager Steve Cochran of the National. He sent this desk a copy post haste and then went on to state that 30 (count 'em) trunks will be needed to carry the garments and smaller properties of Noel Coward's "Tonight at 8:30" when that cycle of nine one-act plays opens a two-week engagement at the National November 9.

"This will be," exults Mr. Cochran, "the first dramatic attraction to play Washington for a two-week engagement since Henry Miller and Blanche Bates appeared at the E street playhouse in 'The Famous Mrs. Fair.'"

Present plans, he says, call for a two-week stay of the D'Oyle Carte Opera Company, the first musical troupe to play a fortnight stand here since "No, No, Nanette."

• • • •

To night's the season's first bargain night at the Belasco. Meaning that if you reach the Lafayette Square playhouse no later than 8:30 o'clock, you'll get to see the week's new film, "Give Us This Night," as well as the outgoing "I Stand Condemned." No extra charge. The incoming attraction is a singing romance with Jan Kiepura and Gladys Swarthout.

• • • •

Another record is not to be broken by the Roadside Theater's revival of "Arizona," which closes the season with a week's engagement beginning Monday night. Virginia True, current heroine in "Among the Moonshiners" and who will resume her role of Estrella in "Arizona," and Ralph Fowler, the amazing detective of this week's melodrama, who replaces Marvin Beers as the dishonorable Capt. Hodgman in next week's production, will chalk up a total of four weeks' consecutive playing on the stage of the red barn theater.

As the majority of the Roadsiders have daytime employment, rehearsals are held at night. Consequently, an actor will rehearse for two weeks, then play for the same length of time. The additional week of "Among the Moonshiners" gave that company a three-week run and the selection of "Arizona" by Roadside audiences for the final attraction put Miss True and Mr. Fowler in line for the playing record.

Making Debut at Midnight

Gladys Swarthout belongs to opera and Philip Merivale to the dramatic stage, but they appear together in the film operetta, "Give Us This Night," which comes into the Belasco tonight immediately after the final showing of "I Stand Condemned."

Culbertson on Bridge

"Dear E. C.:

"I trust that you have not thought I have been soldiering on my job merely because you received no contribution from my gifted pen last week. The bridge games on which I have been spying lately have been dull affairs, revealing the usual run-of-the-mill errors, but nothing either ghastly or amusing enough to deserve a report. That is not until the inclosed hand blazed across the horizon last evening.

"South, dealer.

"Both sides vulnerable.

	NORTH ♠ 10 8 3 ♥ A K ♦ 7 5 3 2 ♣ J 9 6 5
WEST ♠ K J 6 5 ♥ Q 9 4 3 ♦ Q ♣ K Q 10		EAST ♠ Q 7 4 2 ♥ 8 6 ♦ 9 8 6 ♣ 8 7 4 3
	SOUTH ♠ A 9 ♥ J 10 7 5 2 ♦ A K J 10 4 ♣ A

"The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 heart	Pass	1 no trump	Pass
3 diamonds	Pass	5 diamonds	Pass
6 diamonds	Pass	Pass	Pass

"West opened the king of clubs, declarer won and, upon laying down the diamond king, was greatly relieved to have the queen drop. His next move was to take out East's remaining trumps, and after that the ace and king of hearts were cashed. Next a small club was ruffed and then the jack of hearts led. West was not so charitable as to cover, and now the declarer risked everything on a heart break of 3-3 by ruffing in the dummy. When the queen did not providentially fall from East's hand the jig was up. Declarer had to concede a heart and a spade.

"It is fairly rarely, you will agree, that a finesse can be used as a safety play, but obviously this hand offered just such an opportunity. After drawing three rounds of trumps and cashing the ace and king of hearts, then returning to his hand by means of a club ruff, the leading and passing of the jack of hearts with dummy discarding one of its three spades, was safe against any lay of cards. If East had held the queen and won it at this point, South's ten of hearts would have provided a discard for another spade from dummy. Declarer's spade ace and dummy's fourth trump for a spade ruff would have clinched the contract.

"Yours 'till I'm shot,

"THE SPY."

Building Boom Forecast.

Swampscott, Mass., Sept. 10 (AP).—David Friday, economist, told the Massachusetts Savings Bank convention today the Nation would experience the greatest building boom in history within three to five years.

Fire on Coast Nears Wilson Observatory

Pasadena, Calif., Sept. 10 (U.P.).—A forest fire tonight was eating its way through Angelus Forest, north of Mount Wilson Observatory, where the world's largest telescope now in use is located.

Forestry officials said the fire was about three miles air line from the observatory, with its almost priceless equipment, but approximately 12 miles of timber and brushland lay between the present fire line and the observatory.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky.

Hollywood, Sept. 10.

Ginger Rogers dances when she works and when she plays. When she wants to go stepping, she asks the boy friend to take her dancing at the Trocadero or the Cocoanut Grove.

GINGER ROGERS.

For work, her dancing is done in this manner: Fred Astaire originates the routines by dancing with Hermes Pan, dance director. Mr. Pan acts as Miss Rogers. When the routine is definite, Hermes Pan teaches it to Ginger. They dance together, but now Mr. Pan is Fred Astaire.

Then Astaire and Ginger rehearse, she adding those touches and gestures which are strictly hers.

There are weeks and weeks of dancing, rehearsing and doing it for the camera. The average Astaire-Rogers picture takes ten weeks to film. During that period, she seldom has a day off. She has danced long enough in one day to make her feet become too large for the shoes she's wearing. It's no waltz, those dancing flickers.

Her real name is Virginia McMath. Ginger is the way her kid cousin pronounced Virginia, and it lasted. Rogers is her stepfather's name. She took it for the billing.

She was born in Independence, Miss., on July 16, 1911. She had two childhood ambitions. One was to be a school teacher, but she still wants to be an actress. Her new contract at Radio calls for her to make several straight dramatic pictures. She wanted to play the role of Elizabeth in "Mary of Scotland" and even made a screen test.

She is 5 feet 4 inches tall with her shoes on, and weighs 112 pounds all dressed up. She has blue eyes and reddish blonde hair. She doesn't wear any make-up on her face on the street. Her skin is sensitive to make-up and she tries to give it a rest.

She uses lipstick and applies it to her lips with a special brush she carries in her purse. Some weeks her fingernails look as if she dipped them in razzberry jam, and other weeks she doesn't use any nail polish.

She prefers to run about in slacks and low-heeled shoes. She always rehearses her dances wearing slacks and a sweater. She loves to go shopping. She will buy a dress, then go into a shop Or she will buy a hat she "adores" and then go shopping for a dress to go with that hat.

She was once the champion Charleston dancer of Texas, and also, in vaudeville, she billed herself as "the original John Held, jr., girl." She had never posed for Held, but she believed she looked like his drawings.

In one of her early flickers, "Professional Sweetheart," she had to sing a song. They didn't believe she could sing well enough. They had another girl sing and dubbed in the voice for her.

She has a house at Malibu and an apartment in Hollywood, where she resides with her mother, Lela Rogers. Lela is in charge of the dramatic school at Radio Studio and puts on plays there with the stock players.

Ginger plays baseball with the men on the beach at Malibu. Her other favorite sports are tennis and swimming. She is an amusing baseball player, and her favorite position is batter.

She is a movie fan and loves to go to the movies. She enjoys practically every picture, and no matter how bad it is, she stays to the end. Among her favorite performers are Margaret Sullavan and Spencer Tracy.

At home she likes to have a crowd in to play games, any kind of a game. She makes them up. She would like to be able to play an accordion, owns one, and is taking lessons.

She speaks a little French and pig-Latin. She is peculiar in the fact that she is one actress who likes to have visitors on the set.

She reads popular novels. If she had to name a favorite author, it is Somerset Maugham. She seldom reads a newspaper. She merely flips the pages and looks at the headlines and the pictures. Lela tells her about the current events so she'll know what's going on.

She believes she loves to sew. She will start on something, but seldom finishes it. She won't write with a pencil unless it is a long, sharp pencil and has a sharp point.

She sleeps alone in a large, comfortable bed, so she can roll about. She sleeps in pajamas, generally blue, and wears both the jacket and the trousers. She sleeps with all the windows open and, if necessary, bundles herself in blankets. She falls asleep quickly. She doesn't read or eat in bed. She goes to bed to sleep.

Maryland Club Arranges Fete Of Fireworks

Gardens Promises to Have Prince Georges Skies Aglow on Monday.

By Chanticleer.

The plans for that "super-colossal, gigantic and stupendous" water circus and mardi gras at Maryland Club Gardens grow wilder and woolier as the date nears. The date would be next Monday, by way of calling it emphatically to your attention.

Latest addition: Fireworks guaranteed to have all Prince Georges County aglow. Ordinary stuff: Twice a night Capt. Jerry O'Brien will do his 116-foot dive (that's 16 feet higher than that measly old 100-foot dive at the Shoreham this week) into a 4-foot tank of flames. Miss Bench Bentum and her gang of mermaids will do a continuous routine of trick dives. And clowns, too.

Added to all will be a regular Gardens show with Joan Miller, the butterfly dance girl from Jimmy Kelly's.

None other than Jefferson L. Ford now steps forward to announce the fall opening of the Checkerboard Room at Mr. Ford's Lafayette Hotel. The room has been enlarged but the checkerboard cocktail hasn't been changed a bit.

Wellford and Dawn are featured at the Dude Ranch this week—Apache dance stuff. Contributing to the festivities are Lea Parker, in comedy and acrobatic dances. New policy for the Ranch beginning September 21—serving of dinners and dinner dancing beginning at 7 p. m.

• • • •

It seems this is the open season for college undergrads just on their way back to school from summer vacations. Anyway they're in large numbers at the Shoreham right now. Maybe they're attracted by Speedy, the dancing young man (not on the trapeze) who climbs 100 feet to a small platform and jumps overboard to a small square of net below. All in the Shoreham's back yard, too. A dash of musical comedy for the rest of the Terrace offering.

The real dyed-in-the-wool night-club-goer-toers are bouncing lavish superlatives to the girls of the chorus at the Lotus this week. The opinion is that no comelier set of damsels has graced a local floor in a couple years or more. La Nova and Di Misi, formerly of the French Casino at Atlantic City, are the feature of the show.

• • • •

Well, El Patio is now with us. This newest of gay spots in the old town opened Wednesday night in the Carlton Hotel. Admittance by card only. Mexican motif in decorations. Sande Williams and his orchestra for your dancing.

This being the first season for Boulevard Farms, many little things are being added from week to week. All the little things that make a suburban spot more attractive. But after all—fried chicken is hard to beat whatever the decorations and refinements.

• • • •

Lots of compliments are being handed out this week, too, to Bourban and Baine, dancing at Cocoanut Grove. They've been dancing together for more than two years and say the secret to dancing success is practice—and lots of it. They practice three hours daily.

Some of the folks at La Paree this week have been given a new slant on emmcee activities. The current emmcee is thanking the boys in the band for their help in putting on the show. As a matter of fact, he says "a floor show is only as good as the music permits it to be." Everybody likes such a spirit.

Josephine and the Countess

That big water circus can come to Maryland Club Gardens next week—but Josephine is certain she will remain the favorite with Gardens patrons long after the circus and the visiting animals are gone. Josephine is shown here with Countess Loney, director of the popular suburban rendezvous.

Mrs. Markham Feted.

New York, Sept. 100 (AP)—Three hundred members of the Advertising Club cheered Mrs. Beryl Markham today at a luncheon tendered her as the first woman to make a solo west-to-east flight across the Atlantic.

"I really don't deserve all this," she smiled. "I had a job to do, and did it."

Col. Peak to Represent Virginia at Conference

Col. William L. Peak, superintendent of the District Reformatory at Lorton, Va., was named yesterday by Gov. George C. Perry to represent the State at the annual Congress of the American Prison Association in Chicago.

The convention opens Sunday and will continue through next Friday. Col. Peak will leave today, speaking before the meeting Wednesday. He plans to discuss workings of the reformatory, using as his theme, "A Jail Without Walls."

Jews Here Will Mark New Year Wednesday

Washington synagogues and temples will celebrate Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year, Sept. 16.

For one day special services will be held in Reform Temples, and for two days in the Orthodox synagogues.

The Rosh Hashanah observance will inaugurate 10 days of penitence, which culminates in Yom Kippur, or the Day of Atonement.

CHAPTER XI.
Reincarnation.

Mal was distressed to see mortified tears swimming in Pamella's eyes.

"They've run away and left us. How could David be so cruel! I thought he was really fond of me——"

Mal shouldered the blame at once. "Think nothing of it. It's my fault—for interfering. Helped by the champagne."

"You see," she looked at him, trying to smile, "I only came here to please David . . . I didn't want to come."

"Nor I," Mal confessed. "But see what's happened. To me, at least. A chance to meet you. Now make me still happier by letting me take you home."

"Indeed not!" cried Pamella, flushing. "I wouldn't think of such a thing! I live away out in the Sierra Madre hills beyond Pasadena. I couldn't bear to—to impose on you——"

"Miss Wyeth, I'm going to order my car and take you home. What better way can we have of getting acquainted!"

Pamella impulsively held out her beautiful small hand to meet his that had been helping him plead.

"Do come. I—I need a better courage, too."

In something of a daze Pamella allowed her hand to be drawn through Mr. Mallard's arm. She was grateful to lean on him a little, to let him guide her out of the seething ballroom. No one marked their going save a wandering eye here and there, indifferent to people who left before the fun was well started.

"You've kept me waiting the longest five minutes I ever lived through!" he told her when they met in the now almost empty lobby, after separating to get their coats. "So that I can't possibly go on fearing I've merely dreamed you, won't you please write your address on your card, Miss Wyeth? And I'll send it to my man."

But it developed that Pam had no card, nor could either one of them produce a pencil.

"No matter. My car can be phoned for. It will give me more time with you."

"Why do you feel that you have dreamed me?"

"Will you think me balmy or just sentimental if I tell you that for the first time in my life I'm inclined to believe in reincarnation? I've the strangest feeling that somewhere—some time, I've seen and known you—very importantly—before."

Her memory had not exaggerated his wholly unself-conscious charm. Pam thought with tumultuous excitement . . .

As they approached the outer entrance a man, lounging in a chair wreathed in the smoke of his cigar, leaned forward and stared. He even started to rise and then evidently thought better of it. He was a long, thin individual, built not unlike the man who was holding her arm so protectingly. Dressed in the pink of evening dress, and exuding a well-groomed though brittle distinction, he yet gave the impression of having in some way debased his legitimate claims of high breeding. It was this about him that made his hard, deeply lined face so sinister. His contemptuous eyes, separated by two vertical creases, his ironically twisted lips subtly betrayed his otherwise pleasing polish. "Nothing can be lower than a thoroughbred turned rotter," Pam had once heard her father say. Somehow this phrase was recalled to her as she looked at this man.

She began to feel distinctly uneasy because, having given one narrow-eyed glance at Roger Mallard, the man seemed to find her the more interesting of the two.

Stranger Hails Taxi.

As they turned the bend in the drive Pam glanced back, still with an uneasy feeling though she could not tell why. The man had come out onto the portico and was hailing one of the waiting taxis.

Pamella wasn't used to being so carefully tucked in and taken care of, and she liked it. She liked handing her keys over to Roger Mallard, although she was inclined to pinch herself as she did so. She liked watching him crowd his long legs under her steering wheel and say, "I'll have to push the seat back," and do it before she could answer.

While they waited at the stop light leading out into the stream of east and west bound traffic on the boulevard, Mr. Mallard looked down at her.

"May I suggest that you sink back there in your corner and let me do the work of dodging drunken drivers—unhampered by your fascinations?"

"I'll try to suppress them."

"Please do! We can talk together, can't we, when we've escaped from this pandemonium and are safe by your fireside. Don't tell me you haven't one?" Pam nodded. "Good then, that's settled. By the way, before we both go into a silence, perhaps you better tell me how to get there. Not into the silence, understand me, but to your home."

Pamella began to wave her hands in the mystic way of direction givers.

"I think I'm going to like you better, Miss Wyeth." Mal smiled, "now I've found out you're not absolutely perfect. As a pilot you leave a lot to be desired. I'll go over to Pasadena on one of the main routes that leads into the Colorado Bridge. Then if you'll confine your directions to words like 'left' or 'right' or 'straight ahead' perhaps I can get you home tonight."

"I'll drive, if you don't trust yourself or the pilot."

"No!" said Mal.

As he started the car eastward into the traffic it seemed to Pam that a taxi was constantly crowding in upon them. But she must have been mistaken for some time later theirs appeared to be the only car climbing the deserted hillside road.

Upon arriving safely at Villa Far Niente, Pamella took charge. She had the lamps in the big living room switched on in a twinkling—advised Mr. Mallard to touch a match to the fire.

On the Air Today

The ruckus in Spain gradually is taking the heart out of Tom McCarthy, The Post's nightly Postilion. McCarthy was not a seasoned radio news reporter when he was appointed to the Postilion several months ago, but he has all the qualities necessary to stardom in the air field.

Hardly had he fallen into the swing of radio news reporting than Spain became a string of firecrackers with news popping from scores of strange places. The question immediately arose: What to do about the Spanish names and terms so unfamiliar to an American audience?

Tom and I talked the matter over and we agreed that it would be better to give American pronunciations to the foreign terms. For example, the name of our neighbor across the Rio Grande is pronounced phonetically Mexico—and not as the natives pronounce it in Mexico City. Hence, Madrid and Malaga have similar common phonetic pronunciations with the vast majority of Washingtonians.

This course seemed advisable further in view of the short period of time between 8 o'clock in the evening and broadcast time—a matter of two short hours—in which to assemble, select and edit the thousands of words of incoming dispatches.

Hence, Malaga became ma-la-ga. And Madrid became Ma-drid. The warship Jaime became Jamey.

• • • •

For the most part the radio audience is understanding. But occasionally a purist gets McCarthy by the scruff of the microphone and scolds. Usually the "correct" pronunciation of a Spanish word is offered for future use. Usually some news commentator, such as Carter, Thomas or Hill, is offered as an example.

In the last month, McCarthy has talked with Spanish instructors, has pored over Spanish pronouncing dictionaries and listened intently to the name broadcasters.

The result: Malaga can be pronounced two separate and distinct ways with absolute correctness. Madrid has five accepted pronunciations. The war craft Jaime was pronounced two separate and distinct ways by two of the name broadcasters in the same evening. And you can pronounce most of the Spanish words appearing in the daily dispatches just as the Mexican pronounces Mexico—and the result would be a comparable beans-in-the-mouth unfamiliarity.

It still seems to me that the sane course to pursue with strange foreign terms is the phonetic pronunciation which ties these terms, by way of the ear, to the same terms as they appear on the printed page to the eye.

Two Parties Given Power Delegations

The Embassies of Britain, France Are Scenes of Garden Affairs.

Mallet Acts as Host at the Former; Envoy, Wife at Latter.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The weather so far has smiled on delegates to the Third World Power Conference, permitting garden parties planned in their honor to be given beneath clear skies. Two were held yesterday, one for the delegates from Great Britain and the other for those from France at their respective embassies.

The British Embassy, where there has been no entertaining for many months, because of a mourning period, was again the scene of festivity. The guests were received in the garden opening off the drawing room, where great bouquets of pink dahlias, roses and gladioli made the room itself seem a place where flowers grew.

The Charge d'Affaires, Mr. V. A. L. Mallet, acted as host in the absence of the Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, who, with Lady Lindsay, is now abroad. Mrs. H. O. Chalkey, wife of the Commercial Counselor of the Embassy, acted as hostess, as Mrs. Mallet is also away. Others of the embassy, including Mr. Chalkey; the Naval Attache and Mrs. F. C. Bradley; the First Secretary, Mr. Philip Mainwaring Broadmead; the Second Secretary Mr. Philip Broad, and the Assistant Naval Attache and Mrs. Mark-Wardlaw, also were there to welcome the guests.

Falmouths Among Visitors.

Lord and Lady Falmouth were among the distinguished visitors present, Lady Falmouth wearing a gown of beige net with a rose-colored velvet belt, and a large brown straw hat. Miss Margaret Dalton, who was with her father, Mr. John C. Dalton, was one of the charming young girls among the guests. She wore a long full gown of ecru net over rose with a wide-brimmed hat of darker shade.

Mrs. Chalkey was gowned in white lace, with which she wore a black hat with a white flower. Mrs. Bradley, too, was in a white frock. Col. and Mrs. William Glover, who were among the visitors, were friends in London of Capt. and Mrs. Bradley.

The Minister of the Union of South Africa, Mr. Ralph William Close, was among the guests as were the Counselor of the Canadian Legation, Mr. Hume Wrong; and the First Secretary of the Canadian Legation and Mrs. Merchant Mahoney, who leaves soon for a short visit to Canada.

Going from the British Embassy to the French was like making a journey from one country to the other, for the groups at each were so different.

Laboulayes Receive.

Mme. de Laboulaye, wife of the Ambassador of France, and their eldest daughter, Mlle. Marie Therese, received in the library and the Ambassador greeted his guests as they went out onto the terrace and down into the gardens.

Mme. de Laboulaye, one of Washington's most gracious hostesses, yesterday wore a flowered print gown with roses on a black ground. Mlle. de Laboulaye wore a dress of aquamarine shade. They stood before a mantle on which was a spray of pink gladioli, with a tapestry on the wall above.

Willow trees, poplars, and a fountain on the lower terrace, and rows of geraniums and ageratum forming the border for the upper, provided the setting outside.

The guests were members of the French delegation. Mme. Lombard, wife of the Military Attache, an American by birth, was one of the few Americans there. She wore a suit of turquoise blue and a panama hat, trimmed with a little bouquet of flowers. She has returned recently from a visit in France.

Envoy Honors Power Group

The Ambassador of the Argentine Republic, Senor Don Felipe A. Espil, yesterday was host at luncheon at the embassy in honor of the delegates from his country to the Third World Power Conference.

Guests at the function included Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director of the Pan-American Union; Mr. William McClellan, Senor Rodolfo E. Ballester, who heads the Argentine delegation; Mr. Max Horn, of the Belgian delegation, who has spent some time in Argentina; the First Secretary of the Embassy, Senor Don Hector Diaz Leguizamon; Senor Ricardo J. Gutierrez, Senor Andres Rozlosnik, Senor Pedro Rey, Senor Emilo Montane, all J. Heath.

members of the Argentine delegation; Mr. Drew Pearson, Mr. Louis

Also Commander Edgardo Bonnet and Commander Roberto Cazanova, air attaches of the embassy; Senor Don Erasto M. Villa, attache of the embassy, and Senor Millan, of the Department of Agriculture of the Argentine, who is in Washington for a few days.

Swallow Tails and Lace Among 'Fashion Futures'

Fitted Waists and Luxurious Materials Also Featured at Show Staged by American Style Dictators in New York.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Luxury and elegance were definitely established in the American mode for the fall and winter season at the "Fashion Futures" style show held last night at the Waldorf Astoria. The show, given by the Fashion Group, an organization of New York women prominent in the fashion world, was the high point of the style season in that it expressed the fashion leaders' final dictum as to what American women will wear.

The styles presented had been "edited" by the Fashion Group out of all the fall collections here and abroad. Trends, not commercial houses were exploited. Clothes for all occasions, selected from the collections of New York, Paris, London and Hollywood designers, were displayed by manniquins.

Among the fashion trends indorsed by the Fashion Group were new fitted waistline, the "swing" and flare movement in skirts and jackets and the lavish use of lace, fur and velvet and rich materials.

High salaried women (many of them earning between $30,000 and $40,000 a year), who know high style when they see it were the jury that judged the clothes before they were presented to fashion writers and store executives, from all sections of the country. Style leaders on the committee this year were: Carmel White Snow, editor of Harper's Bazaar; Edna Woolman Chase, editor-in-chief of Vogue; Dorothy Shaver, vice president of Lord and Taylor; Winifred J. Ovitte, fashion editor of Women's Wear; Mary Lewis, vice president of Best & Co., and Tobe, well known fashion authority.

The swallow tail influence, as shown in the black broadcloth suit above, was indorsed for American women in the fashion futures style show held last night in New York. The suit, one of a group of selected models shown, is by Mainbocher. It is lavishly trimmed in black caracul.

The black velvet evening gown by Vionnet shown above also was displayed at the fashion futures style show last night in New York. Note the picturesque wired lace tunic.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Wife Wonders if Her Leaving Home Would Bring About Reform of Husband Who Drinks Heavily.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young woman married about four years. My husband is good except he worries me when he drinks. He has lost jobs on account of it. Then, after he loses out, he says he is going to leave it alone. He has drunk less the past year than any year during our married life. But lately he has been going on drunks more frequently, usually about every three weeks. The last time he went on a second drinking spell within a week. He says he has to have some pleasure. It seems my talking makes him angry. I am sure he loves me and the child.

• • • •

I live with my people. They gave him a job. Do you think if I would go off and leave him for a few days when he gets these spells that it would do him any good? Or would it be best to use something in his food, such as those drugs one sees advertised as curatives for alcoholics? Please advise me what to do. WORRIED.

• • • •

DEAR WORRIED: Any good doctor is better qualified than I to say whether drugs administered in food will cure an alcoholic of his appetite for drink. My personal opinion is that such measures are useless, and even dangerous unless taken under the direction of physician or pharmacist. It is likewise doubtful whether your going away from home during your husband's drinking spells would result in his lasting reform. If he thought you might leave him for good, and cares enough about you and the child to wish to keep the family together, a serious scare might force him to make a choice between his family and drink. I have no doubt he would choose his family, but making his choice stick would be something else again. He would have a long up-hill fight ahead of him, and it would depend entirely upon his own character and strength of will whether or not he won out against drink.

• • • •

I once worked in the same office with a man, then nearly 70, who frequently told the story of having quit drink overnight, at the age of 40 or thereabouts, through fear of losing his wife. He had been a heavy drinker for years, and once, when his wife was visiting her people out West, he went on a terrific spree. He planned to be sober and bright before his wife's return, but one morning he awakened, with the world reeling about him, to receive a telegram notifying him of her immediate and unexpected return before the date set. In a panic he rushed (or staggered) into the streets, summoned a clergyman out of bed, and took the path of sobriety.

• • • •

From that day forward he never touched alcohol. He was fond of saying that once a heavy drinker makes up his mind to stop drinking, the deed's as good as done. But the trouble is—he used to say—they just don't make up their minds. They keep kidding themselves they can take it or leave it. And as long as they keep on taking it, they never leave it alone, and they never use it in moderation. He was speaking, of course, of persons who incline toward dipsomania.

• • • •

The drunkard's will to be cured is the only thing which ever brings about a lasting cure. Other things may help, but this is a first necessity. And what rouses that will in one may fail to rouse it in another. The best advice I can give you is to consult a psychiatrist or physician. If your husband can be persuaded to co-operate with those who are willing to help him overcome his abnormal appetite for drink, there is hope for him. If he refuses to co-operate, there is nothing anyone can do. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

PLANNING and fixing up closets for other members of the family is a thankless task—be prepared for that. But it's a boon to housekeeping to have the closets well organized.

The mother of two grown sons, who live at home, has a very good arrangement worked out. In the first place, the room only had one closet that wasn't half big enough. So she had two extra ones built in . . . filling in the corner spaces on each side of double windows. She had tiers of book shelves built all the way up the sides of the closets that joined the windows at right angles, then had a window seat built between the closets and under the windows. That made that end of the room more interesting—which is something in itself as closets built in after the house is finished so often look awkward.

Anyway that made three closets in the room. One of them she had fixed with a clothes rod . . . here her sons both kept their suits and coats and above on a shelf their hats. The door held racks for shoes. Then each son had a private closet which was fitted with shelves and drawers to hold all his various and sundry possessions.

Having closets like these to take the place of chests of drawers left the room proper free to hold two desks.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Swollen Eyelids.

There must be scores of swollen eyes, not the result of injury. At least one would judge so from the number of letters that are received complaining of puffy lids accompanied by skin eruptions of various sorts. The correspondents mention the unsightly character of the affliction and some will state that vision is interfered with. Many will note that the condition appeared suddenly and continued for from one to several weeks.

One of the first causes that the physician will consider is ivy poisoning. These are the days for tramping the woods, and the three leaflet plant that produces such a vicious breaking out of the skin may not be recognized. Fingers that touch the leaves may later be used to rub the eyes, and wherever the body comes into contact with the toxic oil (ivy poison) inflammation will be set up. This oil should be removed thoroughly by means of soap and water, and followed by cold compresses soaked in boric acid solution. A water dilution of iron chloride is also of value.

Other plants may be responsible for similar symptoms, for example, some members of the primrose family from which Japanese lacquer is derived. When mahjong was popular, the eyelids of many players became edematous as a result of handling the pieces and later touching the face. Pampas grass, sold for decoration in the home, affects some people in this manner.

Health Care Initial Duty To Children

Juveniles Often Victims of Lack of Faith in Correctives.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

THE FIRST operation to cure Tommy's squint was not entirely successful, and the doctor advised a second one. But the mother had had enough. She forgot that in the beginning the doctor had warned her of the possible need of a second adjustment. The operation was never performed, and Tommy's eyes, which might have been straight, remained crooked, handicapping him throughout life.

There are many such cases of children whose parents, discouraged when a miracle is not performed, refuse to continue the treatment. Sometimes they take the child to another doctor, sometimes they do nothing. The child of course is simply helpless, for he is dependent on his parents' say-so.

Tom had a spinal curvature. Mary's legs were not the same length. Susan's teeth were crooked. Herbert's skin was marred with an eruption. Mark was the victim of a paralysis epidemic which had left him in a sadly crippled condition.

In each case the doctor could have cured, or at least greatly ameliorated the condition. But when a month of following the prescribed treatment failed to effect a cure, the parents lost faith in the doctor and gave up, or else went to another doctor, who had to start over again, perhaps by a different method, only to be left also after a few weeks.

The children are the ones who suffer by this lack of faith and persistence. The only way to get the full benefit of any cure is to trust the doctor and follow his directions exactly over a long period. If then no good has been done.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

THAT HISTORIC and justly popular American institution known as "the rummage sale," pet of the earnest church ladies who labor in season and out in behalf of the heathen, rises to its most glorious heights in New York every now and then—not, alas, for the purchase of moral pocket handkerchiefs for the natives of Sierra Leone, but to get rid of the appalling mass of junk left in our subways by absent-minded strap-swayers.

EDNA FERBER.

The city-owned Independent Subway staged one of these gigantic grabbags the other day, and I tottered round to see what was going for the usual song. The first thing I saw leather-lunged Auctioneer Mike Shea put on the block was a mess of 2,000 umbrellas! Mike knocked these down in dozen lots, and the purchasers at once began peddling them to bystanders at 75 cents a copy! Then he turned to the heap of suitcases, which furnish the gambling element to the sale. These brought 25 and 50 cents each in lots of four, contents unseen—but most of them, alas, contained little but old bathing suits and tattered sweaters.

• • • •

Janet Hollander, one of our craftiest clothes architects, just back from Paris, says that the cutters and basters over there are now using our American girls as inspiration for the new duds. And it is certainly about time the French big shots learned where the butter for their bread comes from.

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Edna Ferber, the bustling novelist and playwright, is back in her accustomed haunts here after a European holiday. George S. Kaufman, appalled by all his unhappy publicity over that Hollywood Affair, has emerged shyly from his hideaway, accompanied by a bodyguard to shoo away reporters and things, and he and Edna are giving their new play, "Stage Door," a final whipping up.

• • • •

Still another field opens to our looming sex. One of Fifth avenue's flossiest custom tailors for men has just advertised for a half-dozen attractive women with social background to act as sales persons and social advisers to the firm's classy uptown clientele. They are supposed to tell the lads what the girls will like to see them sporting at the fancier social affairs.

• • • •

Our new stunt of permitting youngsters under 16 to go to the movies unescorted by adults, provided they sit in a special section ruled by a matron, is working only fairly well, I learned from a visit to my neighborhood theater. The movie houses have given the youngsters, in most cases, a block of seats far over to the side and way down front—and the matrons, I learn, are losing pounds a day chasing kids in their teens away from sections where they can see better!

Resettlement Dismissals

Resettlement Administration's personnel has been slashed to a new low—13,815 on active duty September 1.

The major reduction of the staff, however, has been accomplished and a lag in dismissals is expected for the time being, according to Assistant Administrator C. B. Baldwin.

Baldwin said he expected some of the people doing land acquisition work here in Washington would be let out and that there should be other dismissals "here and there," but "in general our staff is down to an efficient and fairly stable basis."

"Of course we don't know what the situation will be several months from now," he added. "But for the present, most of the dismissals have taken place and there will be a lag for a while."

Reduction of RA personnel has been going on fairly steadily since mid-May, when the staff numbered 19,544. At present there are 15,703 on the pay roll, but 1,888 already have received termination notices and will be dropped after they have taken their annual leave.

The National Park Service has gone air-minded. For the first time in its history the service owns an airplane, a Douglas observation plane that is the gift of the WPA. The plane is being used to patrol the erosion control projects near Cape Hatteras, N. C.

A. F. G. E. 'Reds'

The anti-"red" shell fired by conservative leaders at the "progressive" A. F. G. E. lodges in the District has turned out pretty much of a dud.

Conservatives expected the "red" shell would burst with a terrific blast, rocking the so-called "New Deal" lodges to their foundations. But somehow the fuze never contacted the explosive powder and the only result was a faint sputtering.

Now even that sputtering has been doused in water by the Civil Service Commission's letter to one of the accused lodges disavowing the "red" accusations attributed to an unnamed "high official" of the commission.

Conservatives still can cry "Communist" at the convention but the "progressives" have an unequivocal statement by the Civil Service Commission to the contrary to unloose as a counter-barrage. Even without the commission's letter it was doubtful whether the "red" campaign would do the conservatives any good—but now the futility of such a campaign should be apparent to everyone.

Which is all to the good. There are certain basic issues at stake at the convention, issues which should be decided by the delegates on their merits. The "red" campaign was one of those mud-slingings by which no one profits—those who throw the mud get their hands dirty and their faces splattered just as much as those who are hit. Certainly the accusations did not do the federation any good.

It will be to the advantage of everyone concerned—and certainly to the federation—if the whole "red" business is dropped and the convention treats the issues on their merits.

Rumors are circulating around town of a horse trade by which progressives and liberals will try to "stop Stengle" by swinging their votes to a field lodge conservative.

Poultry Head

Berley Winton, former poultry marketing specialist for the AAA, has been appointed principal poultry husbandman to direct poultry investigations in the Animal Industry Division of the Bureau of Animal Industry. Winton, who takes over Oct. 1, succeeds Dr. M. A. Jull, who resigned recently.

The office of co-ordinator at the Social Security Board has been abolished and the work transferred to Executive Director Frank Bane. Henry P. Seidemann, who served as co-ordinator, succeeds Murray W. Latimer as director of the Bureau of Federal Old-Age Benefits. Latimer intends to devote all his talents to the Railroad Retirement Board.

A good part of the job as director of old-age benefits is sheer statistical work, but that shouldn't bother Seidemann, who set up the machinery by which the AAA kept records of the millions of farmers receiving benefit payments. Seidemann also has done work for the Brookings Institution, was a budget technician to Gen. Charles G. Dawes when he was the first director of the budget, and devised a uniform system of accounting and reporting for the operating services of the national Government which was accepted by the Comptroller General.

Jobs

The Civil Service Commission is looking for applicants for the following jobs:

Economist in public health administration, $3,800 a year; Public Health Service; junior geologist, $2,000 a year, Geological Survey and Soil Conservation Service; chemists and biochemists, various grades, $2,600 to $4,600; scientific aid, horticulture, $1,800 a year, and junior scientific aid in forage and truck crops, $1,440 a year, Bureau of Plant Industry.

Deadline for applications is September 29. The commission also is accepting applications until September 28 from qualified blind persons to fill vacancies in supervisory positions in connection with the Social Security Board's work in the rehabilitation of the blind. Applications from other than blind persons for these jobs must be in by Monday.

Closing date for applications for principal traveling inspector of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, $4,600 a year, has been extended to September 22.

Edgar Hoover will deliver an address before the International Association for Identification at Dallas, Tex., towards the end of the month.

Commissioners Disavow Lodge Red Accusation

Civil Service Unit Gives Out Denial; Justice Aid Warned on Attacks.

Accusations of "radicalism" supposed to have been leveled against a number of "progressive" lodges in the American Federation of Government Employes by an unnamed "high official" of the Civil Service Commission have been formally disavowed by the commission, it was learned yesterday.

Three other developments in the raging political struggle between conservative and radical wings of the federation reported last night on the eve of the departure of most of the delegates for the federation convention opening in Detroit Monday were:

First, the Department of Justice announced it had substituted Benet Mead, who is to represent the Justice lodge at a hearing in Detroit today before the national executive council on reconsideration of the council's suspension of the lodge, "not to attack any division or bureau of the department."

Second, the movement to recall four Washington members of the executive council who are leading the conservative wing gained impetus with announcement that the recall had been indorsed by Veterans Facilities Lodge, No. 219, of Lyons, N. J., and six temporary lodges in California.

Seeks Publicity.

Third, President E. Claude Babcock let it be known he will fight to have the minutes of the executive council meeting, at which he was forced to resign because of his "spoils" attack on the Administration, made public at the convention.

The "Communist" charges against which the "progressive" lodges protested to the commission, were made in what purported to be an interview with an unnamed "high official of the civil service commission" in one of the local newspapers.

The civil service commissioners, it was learned, have disavowed all connection with the supposed interview and disclaim knowledge of any such "high official in the commission."

Officially the commissioners have refused to comment on the matter. However, it was learned, representatives of most of the lodges mentioned in the "red" interview conferred with the commissioners at 4 p. m. yesterday and left highly pleased.

Sent to Lodges.

A definite statement of the commission's position, it was reported, was contained in a letter by the three commissioners and sent to one of the "progressive" lodges. Lodge units represented at yesterday's conference were Works Progress Administration, Social Security Board, Railroad Retirement Board, Resettlement and Labor No. 12.

In announcing it had warned Mead not to attack any of its divisions or bureaus, the Department of Justice revealed it had granted Mead six days' leave of absence "as a matter of routine," not knowing he planned to use the leave to attend a meeting of the Detroit convention to urge reconsideration and revocation of the suspension of the lodge.

"The Department of Justice is not in sympathy with the purpose of Mr. Mead's mission," the Department statement read, "but does not feel warranted in interfering with it. He has been cautioned, however, to confine his activities to the avowed purpose of his visit and not to use the occasion to attack any division or bureau of the department."

Picketing Charged.

The suspension of the Justice Lodge was ordered by the national executive council several months ago on the ground that the lodge members had embarrassed the Administration by picketing the Federal Bureau of Investigation in protest against discharge of eight union members employed in the finger-print division. The "picketing" charge has been consistently denied by lodge officers, who have staged a number of mass meetings protesting against alleged "antiunionism" of J. Edgar Hoover, director of the bureau.

When the lodge instituted a suit for an injunction to lift the suspension on the ground that the federation constitution had been violated because no provision had been made for a hearing, conservative leaders agreed to give the lodge a hearing at Detroit today. The hearing is expected to be a mere formality, with the council virtually certain to vote suspension of the lodge a second time.

Announcement of support of the recall movement by the Veterans Facilities Lodge in New Jersey was made in a letter from the secretary, John Mahaffey, to one of the "progressive" lodges in this city leading the recall fight. The letter assured the "progressives" of the support of the New Jersey unit at the convention.

Six From California.

A similar letter indorsing the recall was received from six temporary lodges in California, Resettlement No. 233 and WPA Writers No. 236, both San Francisco; Prof. and Tech. No. 276, San Rafael; WPA No. 283, San Diego; No. 291, Berkeley, and Federal Writers Project No. 211 in Sacramento.

None of these lodges, all of whom have merely applied for charters, will have a vote in the recall proceedings but "progressives" felt their action was significant in that it was indorsed by Lodge No. 51 of San Francisco, Calif., as a resolution to be carried to the convention by National Vice President James Burns, one of the council members who supported Babcock in the resignation fight.

Babcock's determination to have the minutes of the executive council meeting at which he agreed to resign, made public, it was learned, was the result of statements of conservative leaders that the reason no full report of the situation was ever made was because of a gentleman's agreement with him. Babcock is anxious to remove any inference that the minutes contain anything he wishes to hide.

He is planning to leave for Detroit with his wife by automobile tonight.

Trinity Church, Where Heroes Of History Worshiped, Razed

Ancient Edifice's Wrecking to Be Completed in Week; Cornerstone Was Laid in 1850; Used as Hospital in Civil War.

Ashes to ashes, dust to dust—

Out of the crumbling debris of Old Trinity Church as wreckers bring it to earth, comes the story of one of Washington's most historic houses of worship.

Under the gaunt vaulted arches which yesterday supported only sky have prayed such heroes as Abraham Lincoln, Daniel Webster, John Calhoun, Henry Clay, John Quincy Adams, Jefferson Davis and Francis Scott Key, who at one time was senior warden.

Old Trinity, to the dismay of half a dozen old members of the Episcopalian diocese, is falling before the advance of fashion. The neighborhood of Third and Indiana avenue northwest is no longer as stylish as it was. Wealthy churchgoers moved westward into other parishes, the income from the congregation dwindled year after year, and now the site is to become a parking lot.

Many venerable parishioners have "raised cain," to quote one church official, about the demolition of the old edifice. They've termed the destruction of the landmark "sacrilege, heartless and commercial." But a temple which doesn't pay must fall. Deficits kept piling up $18,000 or so at a time, and the trustees were no longer able to supply the deficiency, so when the parking lot people came along—well, Trinity was sold.

Rental Totals $43,000.

Parish house, Sunday school, rectory and church, the contract with the Auto City Parking Co. says, must be torn down and the ground leveled and kept clean over a period of ten years, for which the diocese will receive a total rental of $43,000.

In pursuit of this contract, Nathaniel Friedel, superintendent for the Central Salvage Co., yesterday was bossing a crew at a task of destruction which leaves children's crayon drawings, bricks, mortar, crumpled sheet metal, arches, red plush prayer stools and relics of another year tossed in dusty confusion.

The cornerstone of the church was laid in 1850, though a previous church of the same name was dedicated in 1827. On completion of the former, it was called the finest and largest edifice in the City of Washington, numbering in its congregation the distinguished men and women of the time.

Ten years before the suggestion first had been made to make Washington a see-city. So nearly a century before the great Cathedral of Mount St. Alban's was built it was proposed by members of this church.

In 1861 the dark clouds of war reached into Old Trinity. The Rev. Mr. Syle's sympathies were with the South, it is said, and when the bishop asked him to pray for Union victories he refused to comply. Lacking the support of the vestry in the matter, he was obliged to resign.

A Place of Refuge.

There followed many trying months for Old Trinity in which its character was changed from a house of worship to one of refuge. The church was turned over to the Government for a hospital. A floor was laid across the tops of the quaint box pews, and on it for many months the sick and dying were cared for, and there came Lincoln, with gentle words of comfort for his men. Perhaps there still lives someone who remembers the tall, gaunt figure, looking with sad eyes on the suffering around him in this old church.

The church grew and many additions were built. One of its unusual services was a Sunday school for Chinese children, one of the few in this country. But the fine old houses in the neighborhood were losing their character by 1921, and in that year the vestry abandoned it as a church and converted it into a mission.

Final services over the ancient building were conducted June 16, 1936, when an unusual celebration of the holy communion was held, attended by numerous parishoners and clergymen, the Epistle being read by the Rev. Calvert E. Buck and the Rev. Dr. Dudley acting as celebrant.

Last act in its life was its destruction, started this week. Memorial windows, fonts, chancel, pews and other valued interior furnishings were removed and given away to other local churches. Then the wreckers came in. By the end of the week Trinity Church will be no more.

Ohio Girl to Get Medal Tomorrow

A shy 12-year-old Ohio schoolgirl tomorrow will receive one of the Nation's highest awards for valor at the hands of President Roosevelt.

She is Clara Kathryn Van Horn, of White Cottage, Ohio, and at the White House she will be decorated with the Army and Navy Legion of Valor's gold medal for her heroism in saving two boy playmates from death beneath the wheels of an express train after they had lost control of their sled and were streaking down an icy roadway directly into the path of the engine. The rescue occurred last February.

When the boys lost control of their sled, Clara threw herself into its path and upset it into a snowbank only a few yards from the right of way.

Atonement Glee Club Will Meet on Monday

The Atonement Men's Glee Club will meet at 8:15 p. m., Monday in the parish hall of the Atonement Lutheran Church to make plans for the 1936-37 concert year.

The club was organized September 1, 1933, under the direction of Prof. Frederick C. Cross, who resigned December 1 last. He was succeeded by Dr. Millard F. Ottman. Rehearsals and additions will be held every Mnoday in the parish hall.

Jailed Man Is Charged With Attempt to Rob

Louis D. Barlonzon, 27-year-old transient, was formally charged with unlawful entry yesterday as a result of his alleged attempt to steal mail from the bank of the House of Representatives early this week.

The charges were made by the Capitol Police. Following his arrest, several changes were made in the personnel of the Capitol Police—as a result of leniency in the line of duty—Sergeant at Arms Kenneth Romney of the House of Representatives, reported.

Cost of Crime To Nation Put At 13 Billions

District Pays Its Share of Annual Bill, Says James M. Hepbron.

Leader of Drive on Underworld Renews Plea for Public Support.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

The Nation pays an annual crime bill of more than $13,000,000,000—and the District contributes its share.

A criminal has less chance of being apprehended in the United States than in any other country.

An average of one criminal in ten pays a penalty for his offense.

These facts, gathered during many years of research, were presented to the Junior Board of Commerce yesterday by James M. Hepbron, acting director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association. He spoke at a luncheon meeting at the Lee House, renewing his plea for public support in a drive against crime.

Asks Support of Business.

Explaining that the organization's prime object is to reduce crime and establish efficient criminal justices, Hepbron urged the junior business men to add their support by backing—"to the limit"—Washington's law enforcement agencies.

"An efficient police department," he said, "cannot remain efficient without the support of public opinion. Maj. Ernest W. Brown, your superintendent of police, needs your help as much as he needs his personnel."

Hepbron said he and his assistants, working in co-operation with law enforcement and judicial agencies, were seeking facts to promote crime control and justice in criminal offenses. Results of his findings will be released soon, he asserted.

Wants to Do His Duty.

In appealing for public support of the city's police department, Hepbron pointed out that the average policeman wants to do his duty.

"But the public in general won't let him," he said. "For every person who goes to a policeman and asks him to do his duty, there are scores who approach him and ask him not to. That is not the way to build an efficient police system."

Hepbron lauded Maj. Brown for his work in organizing the Metropolitan Police Boys Club. It is a step toward crime prevention, he said—making the policeman a friend rather than enemy of the District's youngsters.

In citing the annual crime bill paid by the Nation, Hepbron explained that the cost decreased with increased criminal justice efficiency.

If a man is arrested for a crime, he said, and is finally acquitted or the charges dismissed, either the wrong man was arrested or "something slipped somewhere along the line." It has been found, Hepbron declared, that many persons arrested and charged with an offense never appear before a court. In some instances, the case is dropped for lack of prosecution. In others, "pressure" is brought to bear and the guilty man is freed.

Defects Play Small Part.

Physical and mental defects play a small part turning men into criminals, the crime expert declared. He cited an instance where intelligence tests were given to policemen, guards and even the warden. In the majority of cases, the criminal scored highest.

Hepbron said he deplored the use of so-called third-degree methods of obtaining confessions or other evidence from criminal suspects, but added that he could understand why it is sometimes practiced.

"When a known criminal," he explained, "repeatedly slips through the fingers of the law on some minor technicality or other, it is understandable why enforcement officers sometimes 'crack down' on the suspect when they get a chance."

Association Wins Praise.

Yesterday's meeting was attended by Maj. Brown, Elwood Seal, newly appointed corporation counsel, and Elwood Street, directors of the Board of Public Welfare. Each official praised the Washington Criminal Justice Association and its aims.

"Under the present set-up," said Maj. Brown, "the organization is a splendid thing. I welcome it. It will be a great help to my department."

Seal urged all public officials to co-operate in making the body a success, praising the move as "a great step in the right direction."

Street emphasized the importance of fact-finding in bringing about efficient criminal justice.

Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, president of the Federation of Women's Clubs, long a supporter of the movement, said her organization was backing the crime group "100 per cent."

City to Prosecute Furrier for Safety, Advertising Signs

A Washington furrier who has utilized the public sidewalks to promote a safety campaign, and—incidentally—his own business, today will face prosecution in Police Court.

Melvin C. Hazen, president of the Board of Commissioners, directed Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal to start proceedings against Samuel D. Zlotnick, 1120 G street northwest, for having signs painted on the sidewalk at various downtown intersections.

The signs read:

"Cross Crossing Carefully—Zlotnick, the furrier."

Seal indicated that he might bring charges on each of the offenses.

"This publicity may come high for him," he added.

Wave of Paralysis Reaches New High

Shifting northward and westward, the infantile paralysis outbreak reached a summer high last week with 183 new cases, the Associated Press reported yesterday.

Illinois, with 30 cases, topped the list, and California was second with 25. In Alabama, the worst affected State so far, the new cases for the week dropped to 5.

Tennessee had 22 new cases; New York, 20; Mississippi, 18; Washington, 7, and Pennsylvania, Michigan and Georgia, 5 each; Kentucky and Virginia had 4 each.

A spokesman for the public health service insisted the increase of new cases was no cause for alarm.

Baltimore Sun Writer To Speak on Election

Paul Ward, a member of the Baltimore Sun and Washington correspondent for the Nation, will talk on "The Coming Presidential Election" at a meeting of the City College Club at 8 p. m. Sunday in the Jewish Community Center, Sixteenth and Q streets northwest.

The City College Club of Washington is the only alumni organization composed entirely of Federal employes. It is estimated that there are about 500 alumni of the College of the City of New York employed in Federal departments and bureaus here.

New Members Feature Kiwanis Club Program

Members who have joined the Kiwanis Club within the last year furnished entertainment at the regular weekly luncheon meeting yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel.

Those who appeared in the program, which consisted largely of singing, included Justin Lawrie, A. D. Willard, jr., William Nelson, Dr. W. Ross Morris, Louis A. Dellwig, Herman G. Miller, Joe V. Morgan and Frank T. Shull.

Atlantic City Man Sought in Capital

Police here were asked yesterday to search for Everett Warren Earl, of Atlantic City, N. J.

Earl disappeared from his home some time ago, his wife wrote Washington officials. His father is critically ill, she added. She believes her husband is in the District.

Boy, 2, Injured After Running In Truck's Path

Condition Is Not Serious; Two Men, Hurt, Face Drunk Charges.

Garland Hudson, 2-year-old son of Millard S. Hudson, of 1439 Ives place, suffered a possible fracture of his right leg and other injuries yesterday when he darted from behind two parked automobiles into the path of a truck at Sixth and A streets northeast.

He was taken to Children's Hospital, where physicians said his condition was not serious. The driver of the truck was not held.

Harriet Thomas, 55, of 1123 Fourteenth street northwest, was treated at Gallinger Hospital yesterday for cuts and bruises suffered in an automobile accident at Fifth and K streets northeast. Physicians said her injuries were slight.

Two men, injured in an automobile accident at Third street and Maryland avenue southwest, early yesterday, were facing police charges of intoxication last night.

They were Douglas Williams, 28, of the 800 block of Third street northwest, and his brother, Frank, 29. Both were treated at Emergency Hospital after their automobile had collided with another car.

The elder Williams later was booked at the Third Precinct Station for driving while intoxicated, while his brother was charged with drunkenness. The driver of the other automobile escaped injury in the crash.

$66,633 NYA Fund Allotted D. C. Students

Will Provide Education for Same Number as Last Year.

School Officials Confer; $19,606,767 Is Set Aside for U. S.

The National Youth Administration yesterday announced allotment of $19,606,767 for projects in the District, 48 States and New York City.

Washington will receive $66,633 of this sum for college and graduate aid for the first three months of the coming term. This amount will provide for approximately the same number of students as last year.

Virginia's allotment was placed at $298,033, and Maryland's set at $86,402.

Meanwhile, meeting at the Franklin School Building yesterday in conference with NYA officials, representatives of ten collegiate institutions discussed policies and procedures for the granting of aid to students in the District during the coming academic year.

Miss Francoise Black, NYA activity director for the District, outlined a program to be followed, and answered questions of the educators.

Presiding over the meeting was Dr. E. C. Higbee, president of Wilson Teachers College, who cordially commended the Government program for aid to needy students.

Others present at the conference included E. A. Valade and Wilfred D. Howell, of Catholic University; S. A. Dudley Hunter and M. S. Reichley, of Georgetown University; Miss Maude Sedgewick, of George Washington University; Sam B. Craig, of Gallaudet College; Dr. M. Meenes, of Howard University; Mrs. H. Woodward, of Miner Teachers College; Dr. James A. Bell, of Southeastern University; Sister Mary Agnes and Sister Helen, of Trinity College; Mrs. A. Saxbaug, of Wilson Teachers College, and James E. Cummings, of the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Each school must bear the responsibility of selecting the students to receive NYA benefits, as well as design and supervise the projects on which they work, it was pointed out.

Monthly wages, averaging $15 for undergraduates and $25 monthly for graduate students, are the same as last year.

Student aid benefits last year were earned by 52 students at American University; 166 at Catholic University; 12 at Gallaudet College; 216 at Georgetown University; 158 at George Washington University; 222 at Howard University; 64 at Miner Teachers College; 7 at Southeastern; 34 at Trinity, and 72 at Wilson Teachers College.

Nats Bow, 5-2; Now in Tie For Third

Bridges Allows Only 5 Hits; Hogan Accounts for Two Safeties.

Newsom Is Defeated by Tigers; Nats' Rally in 9th Falls Short.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Detroit, Sept. 10.—Washington's one-game winning streak succumbed from an overdose of Tommy Bridges this afternoon and the Nats skidded into a third-place tie with the Tigers.

Bridges confined the Nats' batting attack to five hits, put down a mild uprising in the ninth, and pitched the Tigers to a 5-2 victory, his twentieth of the season.

Coincidentally, the Tigers were teeing off with great consistency against the serves of Buck Newsom, taking a 1-0 lead at the start, boosting it to 3-1 in the fifth and making the game safe with two more runs in the eighth. They pounded Newsom for 9 hits.

It was no fault of Shanty Hogan's that the Nats were beaten. The big catcher accounted for two-fifths of the Nats' hits and valiantly smashed a home run over the left-field wall to tie the score temporarily in the fifth inning.

White Sox Gain.

Washington's defeat today was a costly affair. The idle White Sox increased their second-place margin to one and a half games and the fourth-place Indians moved to within a half game of the Nats.

One of the two passes Newsom issued led directly to the Tigers' run in the first inning. After Walker had launched the inning with a single to right, he moved to second when Newsom walked Burns. On Gehringer's long fly to Chapman, Walker reached third and he scored while Goslin was grounding into a force play.

Shanty Hogan's single was the only Washington hit during the first three innings, but the big catcher squared matters in the fifth with his clout over the leftfield wall. Newsom, however, pitched the Tigers back into the lead immediately.

Lewis' Bunt Futile.

Marven Owen drilled a single to right and Newsom then negotiated two outs. But he encountered a single by Walker that pushed Owen to third and then he pitched a double to Burns which bounced off the rightfield screen, scored two runs and boosted the Tigers' margin to 3-1.

They made it 5-1 in the eighth when Gehringer singled to right, Goslin crashed a double off Kuhel's arm and Simmons singled to center. Newsom had been pitching a six-hit game to that point.

Buddy Lewis revived Washington's fading hopes, if any, when he beat out a bunt with one out in the ninth. Joe Kuhel breathed a bit of life into the uprising when he crashed a double to left that scored Lewis but the rally ended on the sour notes of Johnny Stone's strike-out and Freddie Sington's fly to right.

Cliff Olsen Wins Mat Bout

By Bill McCormick.

Cliff Olson won on a foul—of all things—from Joe Cox in a fancifully finished fracas laughingly called a wrestling match at Griffith Stadium last night.

Cox was disqualified after 20 minutes of anything but wrestling for bouncing Referee Cyclone (Zephyr) from the ring, which constitutes a bad case of lese majeste, or shame on you, under rule No. 653, Section G, of the regulations governing modern burping contests.

Cox had been playing "knock, knock" with the person of big, blond Olson for too many minutes before Burns finally decided to chide him for rough tactics, which included gouging, kneeing, use of strangle holds and what not.

"Naughty, naughty," he scolded Coxey three or four times.

"Nerts," replied Cox the first few times, but his anger increased and he finally was goaded to the point of retorting with a heartfelt "Phooey!"

The Phooey had little or no effect, so Joe rushed Burns to a neutral corner—if there is such a thing as a neutral corner in a wrestling match—slapped him a couple of times, then shoved him gently, but firmly, from the ring.

No sooner had Burns been flopped in the dirt surrounding the ring than Olson flipped Cox to the mat and held his shoulders on the canvas for numerous minutes as Burns was striving to return to the scene of action. Cox was free before the Cyclone clambered back, but the rotund arbiter immediately declared Olson the winner.

Following the usual post-brawl rumpus, which was enlivened as Cox tripped himself trying to fling his bathrobe to the floor in a fit of petulance. He rose from his tumble greatly chastened and allowed himself to be led from the ring by a police escort.

Ed Meske defeated Al Billings in 19 minutes with a Japanese armlock in a fast and furious preliminary scheduled for 30 minutes. In other prelims scheduled for half an hour, Ivan Managoff tossed Floyd Marshall; Nick Campofreda downed Felix McQuade, and Little Beaver and Eli Fischer struggled to a draw.

Marty Gallagher Weds Salem Girl

William Martin Gallagher, a bachelor these many years, yesterday escorted the former Rita McBride, of Salem, Mass., to the altar in Boston.

The couple met in Boston last month while Marty was training for his recent successful fight against King Levinsky at Griffith Stadium. Friends even then declared it was a case of love at first sight and predicted an early marriage.

Gallagher gave his age as 27 and the bride is 23. They were married by Father Sheehan. The newlyweds are in Atlantic City at the present time, but expect to arrive in Washington some time this week, where Gallagher probably will go into training for a bout at Griffith Stadium October 5.

Cards Defeat Bees to Gain Full Game

24 St. Louis Players See Action in Nosing Out Boston by 3 to 2.

4 Card Hurlers Yield 5 Hits; Giants Lead Cut to 3½ Games.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Sept. 10.—St. Louis' doughty Cardinals pulled their second straight game with the Boston Bees out of the fire with a late 2-run rally today and gained a 3-2 triumph that moved them to within 3½ games of the pace-setting Giants.

The Gas House gang used 20 players, including Manager Frankie Frisch and four pitchers, before three pinch-hitters and a substitute runner came through with the two vital runs in the ninth inning.

Today's winning rally resulted from three hits and two errors. Frisch started it by batting for Gutteridge and slamming a hit off Pitcher Jim Chaplin's glove. King ran for Frisch and was forced at second by Stuart Martin, who batted for Brusie Ogrodowski. Spud Davis then came up for Ed Heusser, the third St. Louis pitcher to go into action, and lashed out a two-bagger.

Bees Get Five Hits.

This timely drive sent Martin to third and he scored the tying run when Moore threw wild to second base. Another Boston error put Davis on third, where he was replaced by Mike Ryba, and the latter came over with the winning tally when Chick Fullis laced a single through the pitcher's box.

Jerome (Dizzy) Dean finished the game for the Cards and set down Wally Berger, Tony Cuccinello and Hal Lee in order in the last of the ninth.

The Bees made only five hits off the four St. Louis hurlers, two of which came in the first inning when Buck Jordan singled and Berger followed with his twenty-fourth

Reds' 2 Homers Dump Giants By 7 to 2

Derringer Holds Leaders to Seven Hits; Lead Cut to 3½ Games.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 10.—The National League-leading Giants lost three ways today.

They dropped a 7-to-2 decision to the Cincinnati Reds; they lost a full game from their pace-setting margin, which was clipped to 3½ games, and Manager Bill Terry was taken for a suit of clothes by Charley Dressen, the Reds' pilot.

The outfit was the stake in a bet Terry made with Dressen that the Reds wouldn't win nine games from the Giants this year. Today's victory was the ninth.

The defeat, coming at the same time as the second-place Cardinals won their start in Boston, dropped the Giants' league lead to the danger mark.

Derringer Gives 7 Hits.

The victory for the Reds was accounted for by Paul Derringer's 7-hit pitching, and a 13-hit attack against Gabbo Gabler and Dick Budge Shows Improved Form in Victory Over John McDiarmid.

By the Associated Press.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 10.—Seven thousand tennis fans, hungry for an upset of some sort, were let down cold today, but they were treated to a most spectacular exhibition of top-flight volleying as Gregory Mangin went down in defeat before young Frank Parker and the combined men's and women's national singles championships were reduced to eight players—two from England.

Parker, younger and stronger and fighting to gain a high position in the national ranking list, had too much stamina for Mangin, winning at 10—12, 6—0, 4—6, 6—1, 6—3, while his opponent in one of tomorrow's semifinals, red-headed Don Budge, waded through John McDiarmid in straight sets, 6—4, 6—3, 6—2.

The other men's semifinalists, Fred Perry, of England, winner in 1933 and 1934, and Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, jr., the Georgia giant killer, gained their brackets yesterday. In view of his smashing triumph over the Atlantan at Wimbledon two months ago, Perry again is expected to trim Grant, while Budge, on the strength of his improved showing today, is figured to beat Parker.

Thus, the long-anticipated meeting on American turf between Budge and Perry probably will take place in Saturday's final. On present and past performances, Perry is rated almost a cinch to become the first foreigner to win the title three times. At any rate, he holds one victory over each of the other semifinalists.

Helen Jacobs cheered the hearts of her supporters, rooting for her to win the championship for the fifth straight year, by crushing the

New York, Sept. 10.—The New York Yankees, brand-new American League pennant winners, are the most dangerous hitting club ever to take the field in a World Series.

That is the thumb-nail sketch of the junior circuit champions given by one of the best known and most highly respected big shots in organized baseball. The man who made this statement is a premier authority on heavy hitting, deadly batsmanship, murderers' rows and artillery that breaks up ball games.

I gave my word that I would not quote this man. He insisted upon that because he is as modest as he is authoritative. However, I will say this: My authority is neither Babe Ruth nor Lou Gehrig.

Little Leading In Canadian Open Golf

67, 3 Under Par Gives Him Stroke Lead Over Espinosa, Thomson.

Round Is His Best Since Joining Ranks of Professionals.

By the Associated Press.

Toronto, Sept. 10.—Lawson Little, the amateur golfing kingpin of the United States and Great Britain until he turned professional last spring, took the St. Andrews public course apart to see what made it work in the opening round of the Canadian open championship today.

Little slashed three strokes off par with a round of 34—33—67, then looked back and found he was only a stroke ahead of the field. Following the lead of the husky Californian, a quartet of United States professionals and one Canadian, Gordie Brydson, bettered par as they began the pursuit of the title won last year by Gene Kunes, of Norristown, Pa., Kunes was prevented by illness from defending the crown.

A stroke behind the leader were long-hitting Jimmy Thomson, of Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., and Abe Espinosa, the Chicago veteran. Another stroke back came Brydson, former National League hockey player, now pro at the Missasagua course, Port Credit, Ontario; Tony Manero, the United States open champion from Greensboro, N. C., and Ray Mangrum, of Dayton, Ohio.

Pair Equals Par.

A pair of Canadians, J. E. Littler, of Ottawa, and Bob Cunningham, of Toronto, equaled par 70, and then came a deluge of touring pros from the United States. Bracketed at 71 were Leo Diegel, Al Watrous, Craig Wood and Harry Cooper. Among the 72's were Byron Nelson, Dick Metz, Horton Smith, Paul Runyan, Vic Ghezzi and Ralph Guldahl. Others within striking distances were Bill Burke, Ted Turner, Ed Dudley and Mortie Dutra at 73, Joe Kirkwood at 74

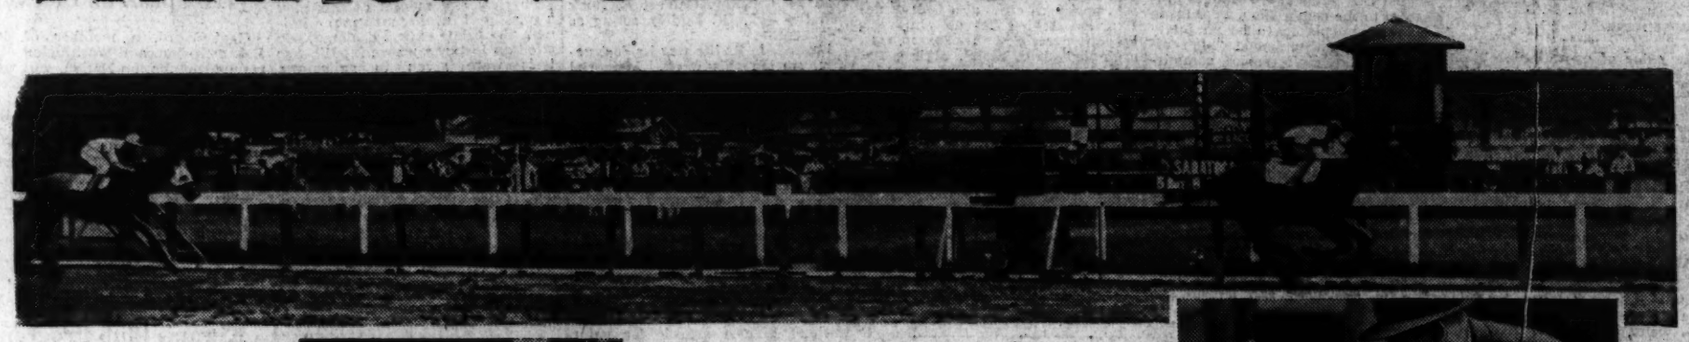
SARATOGA GOLD CUP CLASSIC—

76% VOTE FOR VINTAGE TOBACCO MILDNESS



GRANVILLE BEATS DISCOVERY . . . by six lengths—a big upset in a great race. It was a decisive victory for the 3-year-old champion. And just as decisive was White Owl's victory in the taste test. Another proof of Vintage tobacco's milder taste!

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., August 28—The mellow taste of Vintage tobacco sure is hard to beat . . . that's the majority verdict of 196 men as they watched the historic Saratoga Cup race.

We picked smokers for the taste test at random from the crowd . . . gave each two unidentified cigars—a Vintage White Owl and another, representing the leading nationally advertised brands.

No names or familiar bands on the cigars . . . not a thing to prejudice the smokers . . . Taste alone counted. Each man smoked both cigars, then indicated the one he liked best. 76% preferred the mellow mildness of Vintage White Owl.

Wherever you are, you can always get the same mild, uniform cigar that won these taste tests. And it costs but 5¢ at your nearest cigar store.

● No one field can always produce good tobacco. In a Vintage year, the leaf is richer, more full-bodied. In our really mild White Owl Cigar, we use only tobacco of Vintage quality. That means special buying.

● White Owl's Crop Inspection System, the only known organization of its kind, keeps a check on growing conditions in the finest filler-tobacco districts in America. We know where Vintage tobacco is maturing and buy the best of it for White Owl.

● Aging by nature! . . . an average of three years. No economical short cuts . . . no secret processes. Vintage tobacco tastes good in its natural state—doesn't need artificial treatment.

Naval Air Station Routs Mt. Vernon M. E. Nine, 12-1, in Series

Procurement and Pepco Clash Today in Post's Play-off Game.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Naval Air Station cut loose with a bombing attack on the South Ellipse front yesterday which wrecked Mount Vernon Methodist Episcopal Church completely. Displaying flawless marksmanship in nailing Mount Vernon pitchers, the Airmen buried the Churchmen in the ruins of a 12-1 defeat.

The Airmen thus soared into the second round of winning teams in the Post Association week-day play-offs and will meet the winner of today's game between Procurement Division, champions of the Federal "AA" League and Potomac Electric & Power Co., winners of the National Capital League. Action will start at 4 p. m. again on the South Ellipse.

Naval Air showed convincingly how it took the Army and Navy League championship this year, outclassing the champions of the Church League with a 15-hit assault on Blackie Adair and Charlie Albert while "El Captain" Rosenberry, Naval left-hander, was limiting Mount Vernon to five scattered hits.

Air Station Off Well.

The Air Station got off to a 2-0 lead in the first inning. With Daniels, who eventually collected four hits, and Goan and Hall, who rolled up three each, leading the bombardment from the plate, the Airmen knocked off another run in the fourth and two more in the fifth before Mount Vernon recovered.

The Churchmen made it 4-1 in the sixth, when Manager Forrest Burgess singled, stole second and scored on Howard Whitsell's single. But along came the Airmen with four more in the same inning and added three more in the seventh to make it a walk-away.

Adair relieved Albert in the third inning and suffered poor support on the part of his teammates, who committed four errors, all of which figured largely in the scoring.

Greenbelts Protest.

Naval Air Station joined Public Works Administration among the winning teams, the latter's 4-3 victory over the Resettlement Greenbelts, Wednesday, being allowed to stand despite protest of the Greenbelt management. The latter was well within its rights in protesting the use of Sam Harvey, outfielder, by the Greenbelts on the ground that he was not in the published eligibility list. A double check, however, by the Post Association, revealed that Harvey's name was inadvertently left off the PWA list through a secretarial error and in reality was eligible.

The game between National Savings, of the Bankers League, and Accounts and Deposits, of the Sports Center Government League, which ended in a 3-3 tie, Tuesday, will be played off Monday at 4 p. m. on the North Ellipse.

Cardinal Backs Practice Victory March

Physically Fit C. U. Gridmen Put to Work by Coach Bergman

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Catholic University's football squad reported yesterday for its first drill of the season and, honestly, a stranger might have thought he had stumbled into the all-American's training camp, they looked that rugged. Bronzed, and in most instances hardened by their summer chores, which included wrestling beer kegs in breweries to digging ditches with road gangs. The 42 boys who checked in looked ready for a ten-round scrap with a cageful of hungry tigers.

As a matter of habit, Coach Dutch Bergman put the squad through a session of calisthenics and unlimbering exercises in the morning, but quickly changed his plans for the afternoon upon noting the men's condition. Three full teams and the spares rehearsed four plays in the matinee workout, using a modified "T" formation in the backfield, which is a departure from the time honored box Bergman previously relied on. The change was designed to make better use of Irish Carroll's ball-carrying talents.

1936 Backfield on Hand.

Chief interest centered around the Cardinals' 1936 backfield, comprised of "Spec" Foley, quarterback; Carroll and Bill Adamaitis, halfbacks; and Bob Makofske, fullback. The lone newcomer is Foley and he played so much last season, relieving Pete Dranginis, that he feels perfectly at home. "Spec" needs more experience as a field general, although there were no complaints about his work last autumn and, fortunately, if he werks the team into a hole he always can kick it out. Foley's punting is going to be a factor of major importance in Catholic's success or failure.

Piano-playing Dick Arnold occupied piano-lifting Bill Lajousky's place at right guard yesterday and there is a feeling that he will fill the berth comfortably. In Ed Karpowich's tackle berth stood leonine Katalinas, the two-ton tackle who served acceptably as understudy last year and whom Bergman feels will be a whale of a tackle. These two line berths, together with Dranginis' role in the backfield, are the only two holes left by graduation. From the looks of things if Bergman had any more talent of this caliber he'd have to play double-headers to get competition.

The Cards have a nice looking set of sophomore backs coming up who will see plenty of service, in addition to the reserves from last year who were no slouches. Don Kincaid, "Bull" Gorman, Frank Krawczell and Burke Vidnovic are the sophs coming up. Goldie Glodeck, Sully Greco, "Dixie" Walker, Charley Munhall and Al Secino, to name a few, are the better known holdovers.

Practice will continue on the two-a-day plan for at least ten days, but may be curtailed to prevent the men from being drawn too fine before the opener.

P. G. A. Golf Trials Are Postponed

Indefinite postponement of the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. qualifying trials for the National P. G. A. championship was announced last night by Alex Taylor, of Rolling Road, president of the Middle Atlantic Association.

The 36-hole trials to determine the three qualifiers for the championship proper at Pinehurst in November was scheduled for September 15 at the James River course of the Country Club of Virginia, Richmond, but was postponed at the suggestion of Professional Bobby Cruickshank.

Cruickshank said the course was not in top condition at the present time. The trials, Taylor said, may not be held until early next month.

George Washington's football huskies, bivouacked on the banks of the South River at Camp Letts, Md., shivered a little more than usual last night because 75 sheets, which were to have been delivered yesterday, were lost en route from Washington.

The ponderous bundle of bed clothes is believed to have fallen from the truck on Central avenue northeast, and a substantial reward has been offered for its recovery. The finder is requested to call National 6366.

Jack Espey, publicity director, denied the sheets were for ghost writers covering the camp.

Tigers Buy 3 Hurlers From Indianapolis Club

Indianapolis, Sept. 10 (AP).—The Indianapolis club announced today the sale of Pitchers Bob (Lefty) Logan and Paul (Dizzy) Trout, a righthander, to the Detroit Tigers for cash and three players.

Logan, who was with Brooklyn in the National League for a short time in 1935, won 16 and lost 9 games for Indianapolis this season. Trout, 20-year-old, won 8 and lost 7.

Trout showed sensational form in the closing weeks of the association campaign, nearly pitching a no-hit game against Toledo, a pinch hitter in the ninth inning spoiling the perfect game.

Helen Stephens Hopes to Run In 1940 Olympics in Japan

By John R. Vosburgh.

A tall, strong-limbed girl in a black dress set a powder puff down on her dresser, glanced at her freshly tinted fingernails and strode forward.

"This is Helen Stephens," said Miss Dee Boeckmann, coach of the world's greatest woman runner, and in a low, well-modulated voice, the fastest feminine athlete completed the introduction.

Making her way through hatboxes, suitcases and pairs of fluffy slippers, Helen Stephens reached a chair, reclined and conversed with a poise not usually expected from a Missouri farm girl. She held a vanity case in her hands and opened and shut it occasionally.

Miss Boeckmann and the 18-year-old Olympic champion had reached the Shoreham but an hour or so previously after completing an auto trip from New York. Object of the visit to Washington is so Helen can run an exhibition Saturday in the United States Government track meet at Central Stadium.

"What distance am I to run," Helen asked. "The 200?' Well, that will be a race, won't it."

Helen's hardest race in Europe, Miss Boechkmann explained, was over the 200 route. That was in a post-Olympic race against Stella Walsh.

Helen really had to run that time," said her coach. "She only won by a little over two feet."

Miss Stephens, holder of every woman's sprint record in the world, is on her way to re-enter college, she said. "And I don't think it will be so long before I am a physical education teacher," she added. Miss Stephens is a student at William Wood College, a girls' boarding school in Missouri.

Miss Boeckmann said she thought that "Eleanor Holm got all that was coming to her. With so many young people in the group," she added, "the committee must take every precaution."

To Helen Stephens, the great value of making the Olympic team is the travel you get and the people you meet. "That's why I am looking forward to Tokyo," she said, "but that's four years away."

That is the reason she isn't turning professional yet. But, Helen added, she has a 13-year-old brother whom she would like to make a professional baseball player.

Nats Go to Cleveland Hunting Second Place

Detroit, Sept. 10.—The Nats moved to Cleveland tonight prepared to renew their second-place fight against the Indians. The two teams will play tomorrow and Saturday.

Pete Appleton or Earl Whitehill is scheduled to pitch for the Nats tomorrow. The Indians, in fifth place, are only one-half game in the rear of the Nats.

Ross Believes Leto Master Of Furr

No less a personage than World Welterweight Champion Barney Ross long ago foresaw trouble for Phil Furr when he tangles with Jimmy Leto at Griffith Stadium next Monday night.

"Jimmy Leto is the only welterweight who has a chance to beat Furr badly," Ross said a few months ago, just after he had finishing beating Phil himself. "In fact, Leto is the only welterweight I have seen around this country who I think has a very good chance of lifting my crown."

Now Furr has been signed with Leto, who was popped in as a substitute when Jack Portney, of Baltimore, refused to go through with his 20-round encounter against the District welterweight titleholder, and it remains to be seen just how true Ross' long-distance prediction will prove.

Leto has beaten fighters who have given Furr more than enough trouble—and he has whipped others who might trounce Phillip. Furr never was able to get better than a draw with Harry Dublinsky, but Leto whipped him soundly.

Frangie Klick, who dropped a close decision to Howard Scott here and who once fought a draw with Barney Ross, was easy pickings for Jimmy. Lightweight Champion Lew Ambers, who recently lifted the crown from Tony Canzoneri, was spanked by Leto, which prompted Ambers' manager—Al Weil—to buy Jimmy's contract.

Two six-round preliminaries have been arranged to support the main bout. In them Buddy Scott will engage Rusty Baker and Roddy Davis will encounter Johnny Bellaus. Two other six-round bouts are in the making.

600 Gridmen At Work in Big Ten

Conference Elevens to Face 17 Intersectional Foes; Must Hurry Drills.

Chicago, Sept. 10.—The Big Ten rolled out an army of 600 football candidates today for a suicide season of intersectional games and another stand against the might of Minnesota and Ohio State.

No conference squad matched the indicated power and speed of the defending co-champions, and since every strong challenger must play them both, this year's race likely will be a repetition of the last.

Supplementing the heavy Big Ten scheduled were 17 intersectional engagements involving every member with recognized opposition.

Bernie Bierman faced the greatest problem, although unlimited man power will make his Minnesota eleven at least the equal of the lawless Gophers who swept through three seasons undefeated. In just 11 days, the slow starting Minnesota squad leaves for Seattle, where it meets Washington, September 26, in the first of three major non-conference games scheduled by the national championships.

70 Report to Bierman.

A handpicked squad of 70 reported to Bierman for the intensive training he must cram into 36 practice hours. He lined up six teams for a signal drill, dummy tackling and brief passing routine.

Harry Stuhldreher, former coach at Villanova, Pa., and star quarterback of Notre Dame's Four Horsemen, opened his first season as troubleshooter at Wisconsin with 47 men. Eddie Jankowiski, powerhouse of the Badger attack, was the only man who failed to answer Stuhldreher's summons. He must pass a correspondence course to become eligible.

At Ohio State, Francis Schmidt met 65 candidates, including 17 letter men. Although he has until October 3 to prepare for his opener, Schmidt must send the Buckeyes against New York University and Pittsburgh before he opens his conference schedule with Northwestern at Evanston. The early game with rugged Pitt is regarded as the critical point.

Sixty men, 20 with varsity letters, reported to Lynn Waldorf at Northwestern, but missing was Fred Flato, ineligible sophomore halfback, who was expected to fill the gap left by graduation of Wally Cruice.

Chicago Squad Small.

Clark Shaughnessy's Chicago squad fell off to 35. Bob Zuppke issued suits to 75 Illinois candidates as he began his twenty-fourth season. Sixty reported to Harry Kipke at Michigan; Noble Kizer, Purdue; Bo McMillin, Indiana, and Ossie Solem, Iowa.

Northwestern, Iowa and Purdue are the strongest second bracket teams of 1936, but only Purdue has a recognized chance of sharing the championship. Both the wildcats and Iowa play Minnesota and Ohio State. By staging a single upset on Minnesota, the boilermakers could tie Ohio State.

Black Mistress, at 4 to 1, Wins Narragansett Sprint by Length

Stretch Rush Of Rushaway Is Futile

Tarn Colt Is Unable to Get to Leaders in Short Race.

By the Associated Press.

Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 10.—With A. G. Tarn's Rushaway, winner of two Derbies and seven other races this season, bowing to defeat in the shorter distance of a sprint, Mrs. H. Teller Archibald's Black Mistress won the feature event on today's Narragansett program by a length from Mrs. F. J. Ryan's Sachem. In third place, a head back, came Rushaway.

Miss L. C. White's Good Omen set the pace down the back stretch with Black Mistress and Sachem close on her heels. Rushaway had only the Brookmeade Stable's Clocks beaten as he entered the far turn.

Black Mistress went up on the outside of Good Omen and raced that filly into submission as they straightened out for home. Sachem tried to get through, but encountered close quarters.

Rushaway moved in the home stretch and was running over horses when he reached the wire.

The time was 1:12 1-5. Black Mistress paid $9.70, $5.40 and $3.60. Cachem paid $7.70 and $5.20. Rushaway returned $3.20.

The daily double today paid $42.80 with 447 tickets sold on the combination of Gleaming, winner of the first race, and Retired, winner of the second.

Chicago, Sept. 10 (AP).—Leganda, owned by T. C. Worden, of Chicago, and ridden by Jockey Jimmy (Goggles) McCoy, registered her fourth consecutive victory in the Chicago area when the 2-year-old daughter of Insco-Spinning Wheel triumphed in the feature event at Lincoln Fields today.

Taking the lead at the stretch turn, Leganda flashed by the judges one length and a half in advance of the Rosedale Stable's Lakeview. J. W. Parrish's Perlette finished third in the 5½ furlongs sprint.

Leganda, which paid $8.40, ran the distance in 1:05 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RETIRED, $9.80, $5.80, $3.70; BEDIGHT, $9.20, $6.70; DIXIE PRINCESS, $6.80.

RETIRED had speed from the start, wore down BEDIGHT for the command after swinging around the far turn and, hard ridden, drew out steadily. BEDIGHT showed his usual keen early speed and held on well, though no match for the winner in the closing test. DIXIE PRINCESS, unable to keep pace early, closed with good courage. ITSIE BITSIE closed some ground.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 3:27. Off at 3:30. Winner, Oak Tree Stable's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KHAY, $8.90, $3.90, $3.10; CAPT. YARBROUGH, $3.30, $2.80; LOVELY DAY, $5.70.

KHAY was not hurried during the early stages, improved his position steadily, closed with a rush on the outside through the stretch and, wearing down CAPT. YARBROUGH, was going away at the end. CAPT. YARBROUGH, away fast, showed good speed, opened up a good lead, only to falter in the closing strides. LOVELY DAY, away slowly and outrun early, finished stoutly through the stretch. OUR MAJOR closed some ground, though unable to reach the leaders.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ONRUSH, $22.20, $11.90, $5.70; ARMSTRONG, $8.50, $4.30; BLUE DAY, $3.80.

ONRUSH was permitted to settle into his best stride and was not called upon for his best until leaving the backstretch, moved up steadily thereafter, went into contention with a rush when straightened out in the stretch and, closing gamely, outlasted ARMSTRONG at the end. The latter moved up steadily on the inside down the backstretch, swung to the outside rounding the turn, and held on stoutly under pressure. BLUE DAY, outpaced early, found an opening on the inside at the stretch turn and closed willingly.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. The Somerset. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 4:30. Off at 4:33. Winner, Mrs. H. T. Archibald's blk. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLACK MISTRESS, $9.70, $5.40, $3.60; SACHEM, $7.70, $5.20; RUSHAWAY, $3.70.

BLACK MISTRESS had speed from the start, was steadied along back of GOOD OMEN, wore down the latter when leaving the backstretch and, holding on gamely under urging through the stretch, held away to the end. SACHEM moved up stoutly leaving the backstretch, made a game effort to reach the leader, but was not good enough and barely lasted to hold the fast-finishing RUSHAWAY. The latter lacked speed to keep pace early, but closed with a rush and was going much the fastest of all at the end. GOOD OMEN had her usual early speed, though unable to keep up when challenged.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:00. Off at 5:01. Winner, Carr Bros.' b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BYE BYE MARY, $14.50, $4.20, $3.20; RESERVIST, $2.80, $2.40; HAZY AUTUMN, $3.50.

BYE BYE MARY went to the front in the run to the first turn, surrendered command to SHINING JEWEL in the run down the backstretch, went to the front again when the latter began tiring and, holding on stubbornly to the close, held RESERVIST safe. The latter roused several times to gain a prominent position in the run to the first turn, dropped back nearing the far turn, moved up on the inside thereafter and though closing willingly was unable to reach the leader.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:30. Off at 5:30½. Winner, J. B. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLACK HAT, $25.30, $8.50, $3.70; YAP, $5.70, $2.90; ST. JENSUND, $2.50.

BLACK HAT, prominent from the start, disposed of SAND BROOM for the lead, drew away into a long lead and was never threatened, winning with speed to spare. YAP was steadied along back of the pace, came through on the inside at the stretch turn, closed willingly and outgamed ST. JENSUND at the end. The latter, restrained early, moved up stoutly in the run down the backstretch, was placed under pressure rounding the far turn, moved up briefly, but was unable to threaten the leader and weakened in the closing strides. SUN CAMP was unable to reach the leaders.

ALICE BYRD gained a forward position after straightening out on the backstretch, was steadied along back of the pace, moved up stoutly when called upon, wore down YENOOR inside the last furlong for the lead and held BULL MARKET safe at the end. BULL MARKET, a trailer early, worked his way up in the last half-mile, closed stoutly on the outside in the stretch run. YENOOR, well placed throughout, gained a slight lead in the stretch, faltering in the last sixteenth.

Somerville Shoots 40, 31 in Drill for National Amateur Golf

Score for 2d Nine Is Mark For Course

Canadian Shoots Only Sub-Par Round of Day, but 3 Equal It.

By the Associated Press.

Garden City, Long Island, Sept. 10.—C. Ross "Sandy" Somerville, the Canadian star who won the amateur title in 1932, shot the Garden City course in 40-31—71 today as the foreign stars dominated the day's practice for the national amateur golf championship, which starts Monday.

Somerville was wild with his shots on the outgoing nine, but scored four pars and five birdies coming home. His card:

Somerville in . 343 443 343—31—71
Par in ..... 443 544 453—36—73
Somerville in . 343 443 343—11—71

The Canadian's scoring exhibition on the back nine was the greatest in the history of the famous course, though he was playing from the center of the tees.

Gets Two Birdies.

He started back by sinking a 20-foot putt for a birdie 3 at the tenth, chipped up and dropped a putt for another birdie at the long thirteenth, hit his seconds dead for birdies at the fifteenth and sixteenth, and then hit home in 2 and got down in 2 on the long seventeenth.

Somerville was playing with Dr. William Tweddell, captain of the British Walker Cup team, who brought his men to the scene of the championship for the first time today. Tweddell, playing with Somerville against George Dunlap, New York, and Alan Smith, Asheville, N. C., shot a 76. Dunlap and Smith had 78's.

Somerville's round was the only sub-par score reported, though Garden City, which plays hard or easy according to the wind, was calm today. Three players, however, did manage to equal par 73. They were Jack McLean, the former Scottish amateur champion; O'Hara Watts, Dallas, and Albert "Scotty" Campbell, Seattle.

Goodman Has 76.

The Canadian amateur champion, Fred Haas, New Orleans; Charlie Mayo, jr., Long Beach, Long Island, and Roger Kelly, Los Angeles, reported 74's, and Johnny Goodman, Omaha, and Gordon Peters, Scotland, had 76's.

The Garden City club bustled with preparations for the tournament. Around 100 players were on the course practicing.

The United States Golf Association announced that it had sold the air rights on this tournament to a commercial sponsor.

Other scores reported today: Frankie Strafaci, Brooklyn, former Public Links champion, and Ray Billows, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., 77; Reynolds Smith, Dallas, 78, and Walter Emery, Oklahoma City, 79.

Present Yankees Called Best Hitters

were more dangerous hitters than the great 1927 Yankee club that bowled over Pittsburgh's Pirates four games in a row? That was the season, remember, when Ruth was at his peak—when he blasted out that all-time record of 60 homers.

"That's exactly what I mean," said my authority. "This outfit which Joe McCarthy just steered into the pennant is a more dangerous hitting club than the Yanks of 1927 or the Yanks of any other year—or any other major league club in any season."

He emphasized that the outstanding feature of the 1936 Yankee sluggers was their ability to wither opponents with deadly cannonading in the pinches. They were "clutch sluggers," he said. They played their best ball against clubs that threatened to be contenders—the Red Sox, Indians and White Sox.

Of course, they clinched the pennant earlier than any other American League club ever did, but he wasn't sure that meant anything.

Their club batting average is over .300, he continued, and plenty of slugging power was reflected in their strong threat to beat the major league record for home runs driven out in one season—173 registered by Connie Mack's Athletics in 1932.

What kind of pitching gave trouble to this new assemblage of ashen assassins? There was only one kind that bothered them, he said, "smart, curved-ball throwing. Pitchers who are smart and who have good control." What about fast-ball flingers—like Dizzy Dean, for example? The big shot laughed. "They murder fast-ball pitchers—send them to the showers in coffins. Dizzy Dean might last a few innings against them, but they'd hammer him right off the hill before one series game was over."

And what would happen to Carl Hubbell, the three-speed screw-ball twirler of the Giants, in case the Giants came through and met the Yanks in the series, as expected?

My authority appeared worried. He said, "Now you are talking about a real pitcher. Hubbell is the only kind of a pitcher who can be sure to give the Yanks plenty of trouble. Fortunately, there is only one Hubbell and there are seven games in a World Series." As for the rest of the Giants' flingers—Al Smith, Frank Gabler, Hal Schumacher, Castleman Gumbert, Fitzsimmons—they are like most pitchers—rather uncertain factors. Any one of them might get out there and have a great day on the mound under pressure—or might blow up completely. My friend seemed worried only over Hubbell.

Out Fishing . . . By Jack Hawley

J. Hampton Magruder (left), collector of internal revenue at Baltimore, and Clayton Jewell exhibit their specimen of 112-pound white marlin swordfish which was landed after a two-hour duel off the coast of Ocean City, Md. The fish is now being mounted in the Smithsonian Institution for exhibition among the collection of prize fish.

It is uncommon for a white marlin swordfish to weight 112 pounds. The world's record is 150 pounds and was made off the coast of Miami last winter. However, Clayton Jewell, of Baltimore, is the luckiest angler visiting Ocean City this season in that his fish being a perfect specimen of white marlin is now being mounted for a place in the Smithsonian Institution. It will arrive here shortly.

Jewell, fishing with Collector of Internal Revenue J. Hampton Magruder, of Baltimore, required two hours and eight minutes to land his fish. This beautiful specimen measured 8 feet 6 inches and had a tail spread of 28 inches. White marlin usually weigh between 50 and 80 pounds. Longer white marlin have been caught off the coast of Ocean City this season but none so symmetrical or heavy. For these reasons the Smithsonian desired Mr. Jewell's fish.

While on the subject of marlin fishing, last week the fish had been lost and practically were abandoned for the remainder of the season but some anglers just won't quit until they are sure the fish have moved South. A northeastern wind has pounded along the Atlantic for several days preventing all attempts to reach the outside. On Tuesday several boats put out into a perfect sea and found marlin 40 miles off the coast.

Russell Hollowell and J. H. Hale, of Federalsburg, Md., landed two fine fish, weighing approximately 65 pounds each. They sighted 12 and hooked three more, but lost them on the jumps. They were caught at 2 p. m. George Summers, of Doylestown, Pa., landed a 60-pounder the same day in 40 minutes, hooked four and sighted seven on his trip. Mrs. J. H. Lee Fisher, of Baltimore, fishing with her husband, landed a 65-pounder in 45 minutes, saw eight more and lost one. All marlin were caught after 1 p. m.

Blue fishing off Ocean City is yours for the asking. Running in size from 1 to 4 pounds, catches per boat average 125 to 200 bluefish. Croakers, sea bass, porgies, flounders and weak fish are abundant, says James D. Jarman in his letter dated September 9. Channel bass have started to run at Fox Hill Levels and will continue to improve until cold weather arrives.

Dropping down the coast a little we find fishing is much improved at Wachapreague. Still fishing is good. Channel bass fishing should begin around the fifteenth of this month and last through to late October. Oregon Inlet is having some high-class channel bass fishing at present. Boats on the outside report large schools of the bronze backs ready to grab your lure with the usual smashing strike. However, we think it is a little too early for North Carolina fishing. When the big trout, blues and bass are available to all, we'll advise you.

Fishing for black bonito (cabio) at Westland is good at this writing, but we know that black fellow isn't going to hang around much longer so it is better to make your plans now before he decides to vacate the Rappahannock and York Spit Light area. The bluefish in these waters are medium in size, but very plentiful. Light tackle is recommended.

Chesapeake Bay fishing has become a serious problem of late. The fish are plentiful, but absolutely refuse to strike. Yesterday was the first real day of fishing on S. W. Middles, says Brady McKay, Ridge, Md. One angler boated 14 large bluefish, 1 channel bass and 1 bonito in his day of patience. All fish were taken late in the afternoon. Solomons Island comes through with a report that fishing has picked up considerably since Labor Day when all fish went on a vacation from the anglers.

Still fishing and trolling has increased sufficiently to warrant the anglers making a week-end visit to Solomons, Point Lookout, Kenwood Beach. In fact, all places where fish have been taken up to and including September 1, the date of the "Fish Strike." Take along plenty of bloodworms and peeler crabs. The former are not obtainable once you are out of the city, the latter are very scarce and about the price one has to pay for them in the city, approximately $1.25 per dozen. The bloodworms can be used for trout and rockfishing with spinner attached.

Potomac Crews, Old Dominion Vie Today

Gay young blades who have not succumbed to Cupid's darts will paddle against the Potomac Boat Club's benedicts in an eight-oar crew race, the annual single men vs. married men contest, which features the annual club regatta, final program of the season. The regatta will get under way promptly at 2 o'clock, racing to be conducted just above Key Bridge.

Interclub competition will be supplied by the Old Dominion boatmen, of Alexandria, who are out to avenge a previous defeat inflicted by Potomac. The clubs will cross blades in four-oared gigs, quads, and eight-oared shells. The last mentioned should attract much interest, as Potomac won a half-length victory over Old Dominion in this event in their dual meet with George Hernan, a veteran 20 years absent from the sport, pulling a strong sweep.

Helen Jacobs, Budge Enter Semifinals

Parker Beats Mangin in 3-Hour Volleying Duel; Miss Pedersen Wins.

San Francisco southpaw, Gussie Raegener, 6—1, 6—0. Tomorrow Miss Jacobs will oppose the crack English southpaw, Kay Stammers, in what should be Miss Jacobs' hardest assignment.

Neither of the other semifinalists, Helen Pedersen, of Stamford, Conn. nor Alice Marble of San Francisco, are calculated as being capable of beating Miss Jacobs or, for that matter, Miss Stammers, if the British player should win tomorrow. Miss Jacobs and Miss Stammers already have met three times on grass, the Briton winning both Wightman Cup assignments and Miss Jacobs beating her in the all-England championships.

By dogged retrieving and outsteadying her rival at critical points, Miss Pedersen eliminated husky Dorothy May Sutton Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif. 6—3, 4—6, 6—4, ending the championship aspirations of the daughter of the once great May Sutton, first American player to win a British title. Miss Bundy was far below the form that enabled her to upset Sarah Palfrey Fabyan in the first round. Miss Marble won her penultimate bracket yesterday.

The Parker-Mangin match was full of dynamic play and dramatics, both furnished by Mangin. The Newark player, noted as one of the best volleyers in amateur ranks, furnished the crowd with thrill after thrill, especially in the first and third sets, as he charged the barrier and brought off some of the most brilliant angled overhead shots ever seen in the concrete stadium.

At the same tim Mangin came in for some criticism. He taxed the patience of both Parker and the galleryites, as he looked like a condemned man every time a foot-fault was called against him. For the record, he put on the act seven times. Toward the end of the match, which lasted almost three hours, he was so tired he prolonged his own agony by returning to his position between points slower than the pace of a bridal procession up the center aisle.

But the crowd was lenient, because Mangin put on a show well worth the price. After the heroic first set, which was a battle of services until Mangin broke through in the twenty-second game when Parker wildly batted out 2 points, Mangin apparently took things easy in the second and then bore down again in the third. Parker, all the time, played a sound, steady game, but was being beaten by Mangin's superb volleying.

Playground's Doubles to Burroughs

March and Sokol Annex Title in 3 Sets; Scores 3—6, 12—10, 6—1.

The smooth-playing Burroughs Playground team of Harry March and Leonard Sokol stroked its way to the senior tennis doubles championship of the playgrounds yesterday with a spirited three-set victory over Doyle Royal and Bernard Blanken, of Park View, 3—6, 12—10, 6—1. Though the ultimate losers came within a game of winning the title in the long second set, after taking the first easily, they could never get as close as two points to the championship.

The March-Sokol team, heavily favored, was slow in getting under way. The new champions finally outlasted the Park View pair to cop the second set, then went on to win the third handily. March is the playground senior singles champion, while Sokol, District junior champion, was a semifinalist in the playground junior tourney.

Royal was co-holder of the junior doubles title last summer with Harry Landsman, of Park View. He and Blanken worked their way into the finals by trimming Paul Faulkner and Joe McGee, of Montrose, yesterday in a semifinal match, 6—2, 6—3.

The finals, originally scheduled for today, were moved back to allow March, Tech High graduate in June, to entrain for Chapel Hill this morning where he will enter the University of North Carolina. The blond Burroughs boy is also a star track athlete.

The junior doubles championship will be decided at 10 a. m. today at Chevy Chase, with Bob Richardson and Byron Matthews, of Virginia avenue, scheduled to oppose Schuyler Jackson and Tom Wadden, of Georgetown, in the finals. Jackson and Wadden won their semifinal match in love sets yesterday from Bill Gundersheimer and Allen Weise, of Hamilton.

Holiday Week Clearings Drop 9.8 Per Cent

Only 3 of 22 Cities Show Increases Over Year Ago.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 10.—Bank clearings in 22 leading cities during the five days ended September 9 amounted to $4,229,544,000, against $4,686,763,000 for the full week a year ago, Dun & Bradstreet reported today. This was a decline of 9.8 per cent and was attributed to the Labor Day holiday, which was a week later this year than last. A week ago clearings at the same cities sowed a gain of 37.1 per cent over the 1935 comparative.

Clearings at New York City amounted to $2,696,971,000, compared with $3,871,534,000 in the preceding week and $2,979,256,000 in the same week last year.

The total for outside cities of $1,532,573,000 represented a decline of 10.2 from the 1935 comparative.

Despite the short week, three cities showed gains over the totals for the full week of last year. These were New Orleans, Louisville and Dallas. Decreases were registered at all other centers.

Higher Prices For Steel Seen For This Week

Dip in Output to 70 Per Cent Due to Labor Day Holiday.

New York, Sept. 10.—Clarification of the steel price structure for the fourth quarter is developing as a result of the announcement by Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation of a $2 a ton advance on semi-finished steel, except skelp, hot-rolled merchant bars and the lighter gages of hot-rolled annealed sheets, says Iron Age's weekly summary today. Other steel companies have been slow to take definite action, but it appears certain that the advances will become general before the end of the week. The review adds:

"In line with the increase on hot-rolled bars, a producer of cold-finished bars has announced a $2 a ton rise for fourth quarter on the carbon grade. Makers of rail steel bars have also made a $2 a ton advance except on reinforcing material. Electrical sheets, on which a price increase of $2 a ton was announced by one manufacturer several weeks ago, will be quoted at the higher level by other producers.

"Except for the weakness in some wire products, the general price structure presents a firm situation. In announcing changes the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation stated frankly that increases on some products were necessitated by higher levels for scrap and other materials. The inference is that these changes have no bearing on demands of workers for a pay increase of at least 10 per cent, which, if granted, would lift the United States Steel Corporation's annual pay roll $25,000,000. The management of the corporation's principal subsidiary, Carnegie-Illinois, will meet employe representatives from nine of its plants on Monday, September 14, to discuss wages, group insurance and pensions."

U. S. Lead Supply Increases in July

United States lead stocks as of August 1 totaled 318,339 tons, against 315,989 tons on July 1, according to American Bureau of Metal Statistics.

July receipts of lead in ore and scrap by United States smelters totaled 38,151 tons, against 37,218 tons in June and 30,645 tons in July, 1935.

Stocks Recover in Moderate Trading Led by Steel Shares; Maine and Spain Factors.

New York, Sept. 10.—Bonds held firm and stocks moved ahead on smaller turnover, recovering the greater part of yesterday's losses. Hopes for Maine, the better tone of the Spanish news, and good trade reports encouraged buyers. Stock turnover was around 1,500,000 shares. December wheat closed ⅛ of a cent higher at 110⅝ cents a bushel.

In stocks, the Maine election was the center of interest. A wave of optimism regarding the outcome swept over the brokerage house floors, and the action of stocks was pointed to as an indication of Wall Street's confidence in a Republican victory. Before the opening of the market almost all the brokerage house market letters had referred at length to Maine, and most of them predicted success for Landon.

As a market influence the Maine affair was perhaps too widely appreciated to be an unmixed blessing from the bull point of view. Some traders looking for a good time to sell took advantage of the good sellers' market to take profits, and that selling held down the advance. While the buying enthusiasm lasted it gave the market an unusually strong appearance, best prices being reached a little before noon.

Steel stocks elbowed to the front to resume their pilotage and as a group they moved into the highest prices since 1931. Crucible and Bethlehem went up sharply. Gains in the rails ranged from a large fraction to more than a point. Great Northern, Delaware & Hudson, Nickel Plate and Central were the favorites. Chicago Great Western preferred climbed a point for the third consecutive day. Western Maryland preferred also hardened.

Traders liked the amusement stocks, noting the rush of the public recently to get away from home at all costs. Loews sold at the best price in five years. Columbia stiffened nearly 2 points. The Paramounts had a good following. Public utilities were dull and irregular, although Telephone sold at the year's best prices. Rail equipments improved. Motors backed and filled in a narrow range and with small sales volume.

There was a more cheerful feeling in the foreign exchange market, based upon nothing tangible. While the franc here continued to be supported by gold engagements in France, the cross rate between Paris and London dropped to 76.73 francs to the pound, compared with 76.92 yesterday, and the price of gold recovered 2 pence in London. Sterling sagged here, reflecting the lower price of pounds in Paris. Guilders recovered several points also. Nominal quotations for franc futures also were better.

The rise in sterling at this time probably is giving the British authorities no great concern. This is the season of heavy purchases by Great Britain of raw materials, particularly from the United States, and a good rise in sterling in dollar terms lessens by that much the cost of American goods. Ordinarily sterling is under pressure on commercial account in the autumn.

This week's return of the Bank of England shows a further rise in gold holdings, now at a new high record, and an increase in the reserve ratio to 39.2 per cent. The Bank of France reported for the week of September 4 a fall of 326,000,000 francs in gold and a rise in circulation, as foreshadowed by recent news of gold shipments. Actually the bank has lost more gold, because of exports arranged since the report was made up. At the moment the position seems to be better, but the last answer has not yet been given to the French currency problem.

Bank Publicity Principal Topic At Convention

Human Side of Finance Will Be Discussed by Financial Advertisers.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

"The Human Side of Finance" will be the theme for the convention of the Financial Advertisers Association next week at Nashville, Tenn., according to Eliot H. Thomson, publicity manager for the Washington Loan & Trust Co., who will represents local banks at the meetings.

Mr. Thomson, who is chairman of the advertising committee of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, states that among subjects for discussion are "Public Relations in Banking," "Bank Publicity," "Customer Contact and Employe Training," and "New Credit Fields for Banks." One entire session will be devoted to the study of trust development work. Among the speakers on that occasion will be G. S. H. Carter, of Toronto General Trusts Corporation, and Albert Journeay, of the Purse Co., well known to Washington bankers.

Topics for Wednesday are attracting especial attention. Harry Boyd Brown, of Philco Radio Corporation, is to speak on "Developing Nationwide Good Will by Advertising." "What Most People Don't Know About Banking" will be presented by Frank J. Reynolds, of Albert Frank-Guenther Law Co., of New York.

Haynes McFadden, secretary, Georgia Bankers Association, whose address was an outstanding feature of a recent American Bankers Association meeting at Atlantic City, will speak on "Publicity," while I. I. Sperling, vice president, Cleveland Trust Co., will discuss "Advertising."

Departmental dinner meetings will be features of the evening programs and the annual banquet on Wednesday night will include an address on "The Human Side of Finance."

The meetings will be held in the auditorium of Station WSM, known as the "Air Castle of the South," a structure higher than the Washington Monument. The convention concludes with a business session on Thursday morning.

Peoples Liquidating Corp.

President W. Clinton McSherry, of the Peoples Liquidating Corporation, Frederick, Md., announces that the corporation makes a distribution of 5 per cent to all holders of its certificates of beneficial interest. This dividend is now payable.

A 5 per cent distribution to all certificate holders amounts to approximately $500,000. This is the fourth distribution made by the Peoples Liquidating Corporation and will make a total of 17 per cent paid to certificate holders.

Checks for the distribution are available upon the presentation of the certificates of beneficial interest by the holders to the bank in their immediate vicinity, which in the past has handled checks for the liquidating corporation.

The board of directors of the Seaboard Finance Corporation, whose headquarters are in the Southern Building, has declared the regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents per share on the preferred stock. This dividend is payable September 30, 1936, to stock of record September 15, 1936.

Power Banquet Is Peace Feast; 8 Cancel Talks

Ickes Stresses Need for Low Rates; Carlisle Defends Utilities.

With politics banned after eight utility spokesmen had withdrawn their speeches in the last two days, the delegates to the Third World Power Conference sat down last night at banquet tables in the concourse of the Union Station to eat a typical American feast.

The banquet, dubbed a "peace dinner" by reporters, was addressed by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of the General Electric Co., and Floyd L. Carlisle, chairman of the board of the Consolidated Edison Co. of New Yrok.

Each of the three treaded warily over the questions raised yesterday and Wednesday, when Government authorities attacked utility methods and financing, and the utility chiefs withdrew their planned addresses.

Ickes, after a general welcoming address, said that "to all of us, electric power is chiefly interesting from the point of view of the contribution that it can make toward the development of a higher and better civilization."

He then paid tribute to President Roosevelt, remarking that a "great stride in the direction of cheaper power has been made in the United States during this Administration."

Floyd Carlisle, speaking for the power industry of the United States, also outlined the technical purposes of the conference, and stated that "we are meeting in a spirit of cooperation and friendliness, and with honest respect for differences of opinion freely expressed and without rancor."

After treating the history of power's development briefly, he said:

"The day of a simple agricultural civilization is gone. Business and government must work together. The object of any organized society is to promote the greatest security, well-being, culture and happiness of its members.

"The criticism of the American private utilities has related almost entirely to their financing. Some of that criticism was founded on fact, and the wrongs have been severely condemned by the leaders of the industry, but unsound finance is not representative or general in the business."

To prove this he cited the depression, stating that while $4,000,000,000 was loaned to cities, banks, railroads, insurance companies, housing projects, bankers and manufacturers by the Federal Government, "not a cent was loaned to private utilities. They were singled out for especially heavy taxation, from which the municipal power operations were exempt."

Owen D. Young, who said Secretary Ickes had spoken as the representative of the Government, and Carlisle as the power industry's spokesman, said:

"I speak for all the rest . . . those plain people who are the consumers of both services; those simple citizens who at one time congratulate and at other times console themselves with the thought that in the end they are the masters of both.

"The very success which has been achieved in the industry has tempted unscrupulous men without qualification to hold themselves out in all these fields in order to share the benefits. Such men, unqualified and disqualified, small in number though they be in the history of this art and industry, have cast a shadow on the glory of the great.

"The physical and scientific aspects of power development and use are one thing. The problem of political control is another. The first, being of universal application, are appropriate subjects for an international conference. The second, the political controls, being distinctly national, will not and perhaps ought not to be influenced by your deliberations and so may well be put aside."

During the day five American speakers had withdrawn their talks after the fiery political debate of the day before over Government yardstick power operations and the later cautioning against politics in the discussions. Three others had withdrawn speeches yesterday.

Foreign delegates applauded loudly when Maj. Gen. Edward B. Markham, session chairman, asked that delegates avoid "politics, controversial matters and advertising." The five withdrawals were: E. F. Scattergood, general manager of the Los Angeles Power and Light Bureau; Robert E. Hardwicke and Edwin S. Hall, petroleum engineers; J. E. Pew, vice president of the Sun Oil Co., and Fred A. Eldean, an independent delegate.

Those who withdrew Wednesday were Walter C. Beckjord, vice president of Columbia Gas & Electric Co.; Alexander Forward, managing director of the American Gas Association, and L. B. Denning, president of the Lone Star Gas Co.

Stuart Chase, economist and author, also spoke yesterday at a day session, declaring that in America "Nature's bins are empty over great areas." He said:

"Planning is not a simple matter of Washington versus the States. The States, or parts of them, fall into regions. The most sensible definition of a region from the resource point of view is usually the basin of a great river."

act. Cost of providing "at least" 360,000 drought jobs and other assistance is expected to average $20,000,000 a month for this fiscal year.

In scattered localities and in at least two extensive areas—eastern Oklahoma and southwestern North Dakota—the drought has not yet been broken. But the drought as a threat to this year's crops appears to be passing, officials said.

"This year's corn crop is expected to be slightly smaller than that of 1934 but the shortage is much more than offset by larger crops of other feed grains. Apples, potatoes and various other fruits and vegetables are in lighter supply than in 1934. With these exceptions no important crops are expected to show as low a production as was harvested in 1934.

"The total acreage of crops harvested will probably be found to be about 10 per cent below average but still about 10 per cent greater than in 1934, and crop yields, while perhaps 16 per cent below average, will probably be 2 or 3 per cent greater than in 1934."

Grain markets already had begun to discount the slight improvement in corn prospects and, with the exception of cotton futures, the sensational farm price rise appeared to have been checked, at least for the time being. Heavy marketing of livestock and poultry dependent on feed grains had operated as a further price softening factor. On an average, wholesale prices of farm products declined 1.4 per cent for the week ended September 5, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported, estimates showed further damage to durum wheat, the type so necessary for flour milling. This crop was estimated at 8,640,000 bushels, compared with 9,031,000 bushels a year ago. This compared with 22,957,000 bushels of durum in 1935, and a normal production of 54,020,000 bushels.

Already heavy importations have come in from Canada to make up for this shortage. The entire wheat crop was estimated at 630,241,000 bushels, compared with 622,252,000 last year.

A corn crop of 1,458,295,000 bushels would be lower even than the 1934 level, and the smallest since 1881. It compares with 2,291,629,000 bushels in 1935, and a normal production of 2,553,424,000. The condition of the corn crop September 1 was reported at 40.5 per cent of normal, the lowest September 1 condition on record."

Shortages of feed crops, while averaging less than 1934, were forcing early marketings of brood sows and cattle. Already the Government has purchased about 3,000 head of cattle to hold the market up. Feed grains were expected to reach only 58,000,000 tons, compared with an annual average of 100,000,000 tons during the 1923-32 period.

Although late rains are expected to improve fall pastures, the condition of farm pastures September 1 was the lowest on record for that date.

The crop reporting board said much more rain would be needed from North Dakota to north central Texas to really end the drought there and to give average prospects for the 1937 crop of winter wheat. It added that "a rather large part of the recent drought area has now had partial relief and in perhaps two-thirds of the area, including most sections from central South Dakota eastward, the rains appear to have already relieved the shortage of water and to have put the land in condition for fall plowing."

Wife Says Farmer Held for Ransom

Lufkin, Tex., Sept. 10 (AP).—Mrs. W. G. Funderburk, wife of a prominent farmer, reported today she had received a letter which said her husband was being by two men who demanded $1,500 for his release.

Mrs. Funderburk said the letter, postmarked Shreveport, La., was in her husband's handwriting. It was turned over to Lufkin officers.

Mrs. Funderburk said her husband left for Lufkin at 7:30 a. m., Monday and planned to return by noon. The letter said:

"Dear wife, I was knocked in the head by two disguised men. What little money I had was taken off of me. They tore my clothes off. They say they are going to have $1,500 before they let me go. I have had nothing to eat since I left home. I am about to starve to death. They say they are going to take me to Texarkana tonight. I don't know if I will live to get there or .not

"Your husband—but they don't let me sign my name. Ransom."

Franco-German Parley.

Paris, Sept. 10 (AP).—Paul Bastid, minister of commerce, it was announced today, had accepted an invitation to confer with Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, German minister of economy, in Berlin. The announcement was viewed as a step forward in French negotiations to improve her economic relations in Europe.

Benny Howard Weaker.

Crown Point, N. Mex., Sept. 10 (AP).—Benny O. Howard, Bendix air race victim, was in a critically weakened condition tonight, physicians said, after the second period of delirium in the last 24 hours.

Judge in Same Boat!

New York, Sept. 10 (AP).—Police found Carmine Varreale's car, but wouldn't give it back saying they need it for evidence against thieves. Varreale went to court claiming his car was being stripped even though under police protection. Judge John J. Fitzgerald said tartly to the police: "My car was stripped the same way." Then to Varreale: "Go on get your car before you have to cart it away on a truck."

Fish Delay Trolley.

Philadelphia, Sept. 10 (AP).—Fifty trolley car passengers had a new wrinkle in excuses for tardiness when they reached their work today. A couple of swordfish held them up. The bony snouts of the fish protruded from an automobile across the street car's right of way. It was half an hour before police found the owner of the car, parked on busy Independence Square.

Vast Concourse Echoes to Rattle of Dishes as Delegates Dine.

of General Electric Co. and Floyd Carlisle, head of the Consolidated Edison Co. of New York.

Delegates Become Informal.

Secretary Ickes drank water endlessly. Mr. Young smoked cigarettes chain-fashion in his ivory holder until they burned its end, and then switched to cigars after the salmon. As the Brooklyn wine loosened their tongues, the delegates became more informal, and Dr. Julius Dorpmueller, head of the German railroad and president of the conference since the death of Dr. Oskar Mueller, swung his three Iron Crosses close to Dr. Frank Lillie, president of the National Academy of Sciences here, and exchanged pleasantries.

As each country's official was introduced from the platform with a trumpet salute, two United States marines, their belts newly pipe-clayed white against their dark-blue uniforms, swung in behind the speaker's rostrum, now with the Japanese sun flag, now with the Nazi swastika, now with the Union Jack.

Behind the speaker's platform, out of sight beyond the granite wall, were the sweating dishwashers, moving fast and hard, munching leftovers with one hand, washing dishes with the other, and shouting. "Scram, big man, befo' I bust you one!"

Out in front, before the taxi-lined concourse entrance, flocked the mob of celebrity hunters, standing from 7 p. m. until 11:30 p. m., without a break. They said they had a swell time looking.

Mormon Drive For Own Needy Nears Success

Church Expects to Take 80,000 Indigent Off Federal Relief.

By the Associated Press.

Salt Lake City, Sept. 10.—A world-wide drive by the Latter Day Saints Church to take all its needy "off the dole" neared success tonight.

By October 1, Harold B. Lee, church security director, said he expects none of the 80,000 indigent church members to be dependent upon Govrnment doles. This was th date set for completion of the drive when inaugurated in April.

"They will either be giving value received on Federal and State work relief projects or being cared for through the church's program of cooperative effort."

Lee said "teaching the poor to help themselves" through projects such as canning, sewing, gardening and industrial enterprises, had yielded "fine results" in rehabilitation of the needy.

Church storehouses have been filled in Utah and Idaho. Food, clothing, bedding and fuel are ready for distribution during the winter months. Most of the materials have been gathered by the needy themselves.

Since inauguration of the program, Lee said "fast donations"—church members give the monetary equivalent of two meals a month to the relief fund—have financed purchase of equipment and leasing of land.

The next step in the program will be equitable distribution of the stored supplies.

"Where one unit has too much the surplus will be turned over to some group with not enough," Lee explained. "We will see that no person is forgotten."
